Little Entente Warns Hungary and League Terrorism Must End

Plan United Front Against Invasion

Bulgaria Asked to Join With 3 Countries to Thwart Conflict.

Belgrade, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Little Entente, stoutly determined to "stand four-square against all who attack any one of its members," tonight decided to protest to Hungary and the League of Nations on Hungary's alleged harboring of international terrorists.

Their action came while unconfirmed rumors ran about Belgrade that Yugoslav troops were concentrating near the Hungarian border.

Seek to Extend Alliance.

Meeting here to consider the critical political situation growing out of the assassination at Marseille of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and to seek ways of extending their alliance throughout the Balkans, the south European statesmen decided to protest alleged existence of terrorist camps in Hungary.

They will charge, it is understood, that Hungary, despite its claims to the contrary, has taken no steps to disband the groups of political terrorists they assert have found shelter within her boundaries.

The decision of the Little Entente members—Yugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia—to register joint protest served to emphasize their recent agreement to act together in matters of foreign policy.

Bulgaria May Join Bloc.

While Yugoslavia's child King, Peter II, gave his toys to his younger brothers to take over his duties of state, giving hope to Croats and Slovenes that the new Liberal regime might ultimately grant them autonomy, the Entente's foreign ministers considered adding Bulgaria to their political partnership.

A solid bloc of southern European powers would thus be formed to oppose any European aggression, but it was understood the Little Entente also would seek to tie Turkey and Greece in with their alliance.

This could be done, it was pointed out, through Bulgaria's adherence to the Balkan peace pact.

United Front Proposed.

Signatories of that treaty also met here today, and it was believed efforts were made to have the four—Yugoslavia, Rumania, Turkey and Greece—agree to act jointly in all cases where they were menaced.

A spokesman for the Little Entente stated tonight:

"Those who thought that by murdering Alexander they would weaken Yugoslavia and perhaps bring

Mexico to Oust Church Leaders

Chamber Votes Expulsion of Catholic Bishops and Archbishops.

Mexico, D. F., Oct. 19 (AP).—The Chamber of Deputies voted tonight to request President Abelardo Rodriguez to expel all Catholic bishops and archbishops from Mexico as a step "toward solving the Catholic question permanently."

Several speakers, in a stormy session in which Catholics were charged with supporting the current agitation against the Government's plan for socialistic education, urged the creation of an atheistic state by abolishing all religion.

The proposal for the expulsion of Catholic bishops and archbishops was made by Deputy Luis Enrique Erro, and was approved unanimously by the chamber. The body vited to petition the National Revolutionary (government) party to transmit its request to President Rodriguez.

Several university students were arrested today while allegedly attempting to buy arms and ammunitions, and a number of other persons were detained for agitating against socialistic education.

Jealous Woman Bares Intrigue in Balkans

By John Randolph.

A jealous and vengeful woman again entered the picture of tangled Balkan affairs yesterday with the arrest of Anton Pavelich, Croatian terrorist leader, at Turin, Italy, as a conspirator in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

She is Yelke (Helen) Pogoreles, and by her own written testimony she is somewhere in the United States. It was because her lover and cousin, Gustav Perchetz, or Pachetz, cast her aside that she revealed to Yugoslavian authorities the plots and bombings hatched on their murder farm, Yanka Pusta, in Hungary, just beyond the Yugoslavian border. Perchetz and Pavelich were tried in their absence and her "squeal" with testimony of other witnesses resulted in a death sentence for both.

Her tragic story reached Washington in the form of a booklet published in Zagreb entitled "Confessions of Yelke Pogoreles" and containing her signed statements together with photographic reproductions of photostatic copies of documents.

Yelke Pogoreles, in long written statements backed up with pictures of herself and Perchetz together and with photostatic copies of passports issued to herself and Perchetz under assumed names, told of great international connections for intrigue involving Pavelich and Perchetz, and of the luxurious life they had enjoyed on money furnished them by the enemies of their country.

She said remorse and horror at the role they were playing caused her to "tell all." But she also said that even her remorse was not enough until Perchetz grew cold and cast her aside for other women.

"I, as a young girl," she declared, "believed their lies, and I accompanied my cousin Perchetz to Italy and Austria, and later to Hungary, where Perchetz had help officially from the Hungarian government."

"Thanks to my Hungarian pass-

Japan to Ask Naval Parity Recognition

Expected to Accept Less Actual Tonnage if 'Ratio' Is Dropped.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

London, Oct. 19.—Japan wants Great Britain and the United States to recognize the principle of parity in naval defensive armaments before she shows her hand in tripower conversations here, it was learned authoritatively today.

If the other two nations agreed to the principle, however, it was expected the Japanese would be willing to accept much less than actual tonnage equality.

That would be Japan's way of getting rid of the rankling word "ratio," which led Nippon to its decision to denounce the Washington and London naval treaties.

The three delegations stand pledged to exert every effort to reach a compromise that would avert an armaments race.

Assurances Exchanged.

Norman H. Davis and Admiral William H. Standley, the American conferees, exchanged such assurances with Sir John Simon and Commander B. M. Eyres Monsell, of the British delegation, yesterday. Similar pledges passed among the Americans and the Japanese, Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto and Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira, when they met today.

The Japanese also have conferred with the British, and it was understood their talk, too, involved like promises.

Japan's entire case for treaty revision, however, is bound up with its determination not to reveal its entire technical program before the other two powers recognize "in

New York Takes Step To Extradite Poderjay

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Assistant District Attorney Harold W. Hastings announced today that he had requested Gov. Lehman to ask the State Department in Washington to request Austria to extradite Ivan Poderjay, husband of the missing Agnes C. Tufverson, New York and Detroit corporation lawyer.

Hastings said that bigamy evidence would be presented to the grand jury next week against Poderjay.

Lyman Kelley Found Guilty In Bribe Case

Jury Convicts Arlington Official After Hour's Deliberation.

Lyman M. Kelley, chairman of the Board of Arlington County Commissioners, late yesterday was found guilty by a jury in Arlington Circuit Court of soliciting a bribe from Clyde C. Lamond, president of the Clarendon Trust Co., and soliciting and accepting a bribe from Roger Daniels, who at one time held a contract with Arlington County for the removal of refuse.

The jury voted acquittal on two charges of improper solicitation of business. Kelley is member of a firm engaged in writing performance bonds.

Kelley's counsel immediately moved to set aside the verdict and for a new trial. Judge Frederick W. Coleman, of Fredericksburg, before whom the trial was held, set November 3 for argument on the defense motion and any judgment by the court to remove Kelley from his official duties will be entered after the argument.

Little more than an hour was taken by the jury in reaching its verdict and the seven-man body made known its decision a little before 6 o'clock.

The Daniels charge revolved around a bill for $250—"for special services rendered"—after Daniels received a county contract in 1933. Daniels swore he paid $200 of the bill, although he testified he didn't think he owed Kelley the amount. Kelley, however, denied the bill was paid.

Mr. Lamond had testified Kelley wanted to know "what will I get out of this" if clay pipe was used in parts of the county-wide sewer system then under bid by contractors.

A crowded courtroom heard the jury, led by James B. Lockwood, foreman, return its verdict. Kelley declined to comment.

Kelley is the third Arlington County official to be convicted in the old courtroom. Before him were William H. Duncan, Circuit Court clerk, who went to the penitentiary for three years for misappropriating court funds, and E. Wade Ball, treasurer, who received a 2½-year sentence for taking approximately $500,000 of the county's money.

Court's Files Vanish, Call To Jury Seen

Building Under Guard, Fine Irregularities Are Indicated.

Disappearance of papers and documents from the files of the Police Court several months ago precipitated the Department of Justice investigation of the court's records, it was revealed yesterday. It also was stated unofficially that the District grand jury would be asked to inquire into alleged irregularities of the court.

The papers, it was revealed, disappeared from the desk of a high court official. Shortly afterward Judge John P. McMahon detected a somewhat unusual procedure of "nolle prossing" a bond case. His subsequent inquiry developed facts that are now the subject of inquiry.

Police Court officials have adopted extreme methods of protecting the court's records from invasion recently. The Sixth street door, through which bondsmen, lawyers and prisoners have been permitted ingress, has been locked. Locks on other doors which permitted ingress to the building have been changed and only three of the higher officers of the courts have been given keys.

Deputies on Guard.

In addition, deputy United States marshals have been stationed in the building, augmenting the lone night watchman, to see the court records are not molested. All persons other than those connected with the court have been forbidden to enter the inner recesses of the court clerk's office in recent weeks.

Shortly after disappearance of the papers a special agent of the Department of Justice made a cursory investigation. From then on, it was understood, a secret investigator of the Department has been at work to learn the methods and procedure of the court. This agent is said to have unearthed sufficient prima facie evidence upon which to warrant a special, searching investigation.

Three agents are now looking into every book and paper record. What they have discovered is a secret, but their search is being centered on three things. These are: First, the strange disappearance of bond papers, which in one week approximated 15 out of 20; second, the releasing of prisoners after they had been sentenced to serve jail terms; and, third, what happens to fines after they have been levied in the courtroom.

Going Back to 1932.

In this latter connection, it was said, court attaches accompany the defendant to the financial office with an "information" paper showing the fine. It is expected that

Two Courts Weigh Vanderbilt Case

Behind the closed doors of Justice John F. Carew's courtroom, counsel for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney neared the end of her attempt to win cusotdy of little Gloria from the girl's mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, widow of Reginald C. Vanderbilt.

A surrogate's court meanwhile entered an order continuing proceedings under which there will be an eventual division of Cornelius Vanderbilt's trust funds of $21,250,000, in which little Gloria has approximately a one-eighth interest.

Hauptmann Plea Denied; Goes to N. J.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann must face trial in New Jersey for the kidnap-slaying of the Lindbergh baby.

He lost his appeal—his attorney said it was his last—in the courts tonight. Attorney General David T. Wilentz took him at once from the Bronx County Jail to Flemington, N. J.

His head down, Hauptmann was led from the jail as a crowd of about 300 persons attempted to press forward.

Handcuffed to Lieut. Arthur Keating, of the New Jersey State police, he took a seat in a New Jersey official car. For a moment he stared stolidly ahead.

Attorney General Wilentz, his assistants and 12 New Jersey detectives and Satte troopers quickly jumped into other cars. In the sidecar of a motorcycle a trooper held a rifle in his lap.

Cars Speed Away.

Wilentz gave a signal. With its siren screaming, the motorcycle shot down the road. The car bearing Hauptmann roared along behind it, followed by the other automobiles.

The caravan sped through the Bronx and across the George Washington Bridge over the Hudson River. Three hours and a half after the court decision, Hauptmann was lodged in Cell No. 1 of the Hunterdon County Jail.

Five justices of the appellate division of the Supreme Court upheld Justice Ernest E. L. Hammer, of the Bronx, in refusing to grant a writ of habeas corpus for Hauptmann after extradition papers had been signed.

Of a last-minute plea by Hauptmann's counsel that he had new evidence to show the prisoner was in New York the day of the kidnaping, the justices said:

"This contention is in direct conflict with documentary evidence already in the record."

Crowd On Hand.

The justices handed down their opinion an hour after they had listened, in a crowded courtroom, to the pleadings of Defense Attorney James M. Fawcett.

"This evidence I am offering is very important," said Fawcett, seeking to introduce an affidavit of Joseph M. Furcht that Hauptmann was working for him on March 1, 1932, up to a few hours before the abduction.

Assistant District Attorney Sol Boneparth, opposing the hearing of further evidence, said a man named Cassens, who had been working for Furcht on the Majestic Hoel apartment building, made an affidavit that Hauptmann told him:

"I can't get a job here because only one man is to be hired."

"In the case at bar," the Court's opinion said, "not only has the Governor of New York honored the requisition of the Governor of New Jersey, as already noted, but also, after a most exhaustive hearing be-

Finns Seek Approval Of U. S. to New Envoy

Helsingfors, Finland, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Finnish government today decided to inquire if the nomination of Eero Jarnefelt, chief of the foreign office, as minister to Washington, would be agreeable to the United States.

Jarnefelt, who would succeed Axel L. Astroem, has served in the foreign office since 1920. He was secretary to legations in Moscow, London and Paris before coming to his present position in 1933.

Twelve New Villages Will House Destitute

Government Sets Aside $3,000,000 for Immediate Construction; Cheaper Homes Here "Damned Soon," Hopkins Says.

(Associated Press.)

About $3,000,000 in Federal relief funds was set aside yesterday for immediate construction of 12 rural-industrial communities in which homes and farms will be leased to destitute families. Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, told newspapermen of his plans, displaying photographs of homes already built by relief workers and relief funds in three such villages. So far as he was concerned, he said, the day of cheaper housing in this country was coming "damned soon."

He explained that the 12 communities would range in size from 150 to 700 homes. These are to be occupied by stranded industrial families; families transplanted from sub-marginal farm land purchased by the Government and families on city relief rolls who have "agricultural background."

The relief administrator disclosed that 40 States now have Federal finance rural rehabilitation corporations equipped to carry on such development. Mr. Hopkins said that plans had been drawn for 50 communities, but that all of the projects would not be authorized at this time.

Discounting assertions that the movement of industrial populations to these communities would conflict with the AAA's crop adjustment policy, Mr. Hopkins said one community contemplated would take 300 acres out of cotton growing next year.

"I believe in the economy of abundance," he added. "I am not one of the scarcity boys. Present conditions aren't going to last forever." He said some of he 12 communities would be entirely agricultural; others would need industries to help support the families settling in them.

Expressing confidence that all the

Wardman's Mother-in-Law Hurt in Gas Stove Explosion

Mrs. Margaret Glascox, 65, mother-in-law of Harry Wardman, prominent builder, was burned and a guest injured late yesterday when a gas stove exploded and flames spread through Mrs. Glascox's home, 610 Tuckerman street northwest.

Before firemen extinguished the fire, approximately $50,000 worth of fine furniture, given Mrs. Glascox by her son-in-law, was destroyed, firefighters said.

Harry McMoniger, 73, of the Olympia Apartments, Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest, fell down a flight of steps and suffered a dislocated right shoulder. He was trying to reach Mrs. Glascox, who was fighting the flames. Mr. McMoniger was taken to the Walter Reed Hospital.

Mrs. Glascox was taken to Garfield Hospital by Mrs. Wardman. She was burned on the face and hands and her condition is not now considered serious.

The pet police dog of Mr. McMoniger, which had been put in the basement during the visit, was caught there and suffocated by the smoke. The house was badly damaged and water-soaked throughout, the loss centering largely in the furniture and rugs, it was said. No cause of the reported explosion could be learned.

Prince of Wales and British Rulers Visit Airmen Awaiting Start of 12,000-Mile Race From England to Australia, Gold and Glory.

Mildenhall Airdrome, England, Oct. 19 (AP).—Twenty airplanes tonight awaited the dawn, and the roaring flight into the southeast over 12,000 miles of jungle, mountain, desert and sea, toward a pot of gold in Melbourne.

A last-minute scratch by the dapper Irishman, Col. James C. Fitzmaurice, whose fleet American-built ship could not meet weight requirements, cut the number of entries to an even score.

Fitzmaurice withdrew half an hour after his appeal to the stewards of the Royal Aero Club had been denied. He faced necessity of bringing the loaded weight of his ship down from 8,000 to 5,400 pounds, the maximum weight allowed him by the Department of Commerce authorities at Washington.

Because that would have cut sharply into his flying range, he decided to withdraw. It was reported, however, he would fly the 12,000-mile course unofficially, his ship loaded to capacity with fuel.

Paced by J. A. and Amy Johnson Mollison, the craft will soar away at 45-second intervals beginning at 6:30 a. m. Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, Americans, will follow the Mollisons.

The other United States entries, Miss Jacqueline Cochran and Wesley Smith, take off ninth, and John H. Wright and John Bolando, tenth.

The tenseness on the eve of the race, broken this afternoon by the visit of the Prince of Wales and the unexpected arrival of King George and Queen Mary, settled over the field again immediately after the royal party had left.

One of the last to pronounce a plane ready after an all-day vigil of supervising the work, was Smith, Miss Cochran's copilot. It was not until long after darkness that he was able to say "everything is now all right for the morning—we've had some trouble with the flap, which is used to slow up our landing, but I expect it will function

Stoll Kidnaper Heading West With Ransom

U. S. Agents Learn Young Robinson Seeks Escape to Far East.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 19 (AP).—Thomas Henry Robinson, jr., tonight was believed heading for California and the Far East, in an effort to escape arrest for the kidnaping of Alice Speed Stoll, Louisville society luminary.

After police and Federal men had spent the day chasing reports of the phantom's whereabouts from the Eastern seaboard through the midlands, Joseph Dunn, Justice Department agent at Los Angeles, declared:

"We have learned that Robinson has eluded the last cordon flung around the Middle West.

Headed for West Coast.

"There are definite indications that he is headed toward California with the bulk of the $50,000 ransom paid for Mrs. Stoll's release.

"We have good reason to believe that Robinson will try to board a vessel at Los Angeles Harbor or San Francisco."

Dunn's statement came after police agencies on both sides of the Great Divide were rushed to transportation terminals to head off the phantom wild man.

Earlier numerous statements regarding Robinson's whereabouts and appearances of ransom bills poured into the eager ears of Justice Department commanders.

Parents Go to Daughter.

2 Big Dairies Pledge 9-Cent Milk for Poor

Accord Reached at Parley With Allen on Sale of Surplus.

Approval of the biggest milk distributor in Washington was given yesterday to the proposal of Commissioner George E. Allen to have milk producers sell their so-called surplus milk at a lower price to persons on relief rolls.

The approval was given at a conference between Commissioner Allen, Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, and Henry N. Brawner, jr., head of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase dairies.

The conference was the aftermath of a challenge flung to the dairy head by the Commissioner as a result of an advertisement published by him.

In the advertisement, Mr. Brawner declared that his concern had been delivering milk to needy families at 11 cents a quart, the price agreed on by the Embassy Dairy. The price is 2 cents less than the standard price and 3 cents less than the producers and the distributors contemplated charging Washington consumers of milk.

If the plan is carried through it will mean that the poor of Washington will be enabled to get milk for 9 cents or less a quart.

Success of the plan hinges on the willingness of the producers to agree to it. Frank S. Walker, head of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, told Commissioner Allen on Thursday he wanted to cooperate. He is to make a report, after a survey of his membership, early next wek.

Fire Perils Terminal Of Ships in Portland

Portland, Oreg., Oct. 19 (AP).—Flames roared through the $1,200,000 oceanic terminal of the North Shore waterfront today, giving Portland one of its most serious fire threats in years, but were subdued in a spectacular fight by dock workers and firemen.

Dock employes closed fire doors and started the interior sprinkling system. Seventeen engine companies and three fireboats fought the blaze. Three coastwise freighters were moved from the dock to midstream.

Record Night Crowd of 22,000 Sees G. W. U. Blank Tulsa, 10-0

Washington's night out last evening took the form of a football party under the bright lights of Griffith Stadium. Citizens of the Capital to the number of 22,000, undaunted by a slight chill in the air, watched George Washington University's 10-0 defeat of the invading team from Tulsa University and throbbed to the fast-moving scenes.

Night football reached a new high in the Capital in point of attendance as G. W. U. crowned with success its fifth bid to conquer the Oklahomans after four years of failure.

George Washington put on a show for them. The scheduled attractions between the halves vied with the impromptu thrills unfolded by the football game. A high-stepping band leader, strutting at the head of an ornately-uniformed parade of bandsmen, touched off a show that reached its peak in a pyrotechnical display by professional fireworks directors.

Five thousand G. W. U. students in the stands presented for their approval a colorful manipulation of letters with blue and yellow cards that formed in flawless style the words "G. W. U." and "Tulsa."

Underprivileged Come First, Reminder at Hospital.

(Post Staff Writer).

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 19.—Bluntly declaring that veterans as a whole are "better off" than any other great group of American citizens, President Roosevelt today reassured business that the credit of the Government would be protected against overspending. His remarks were construed to oppose full payment of the bonus, although it was not mentioned by name.

Before a colorful throng estimated as high as 40,000, gathered near here for the dedication of a new neuropsychiatric veterans' hospital, the President expressed confidence that the veterans will "go along" with his program of putting "first things first," namely, the care of the sick, the underprivileged and the starving.

In clear, unmistakable language he reminded the Nation's former service men that they are the beneficiaries of "many privileges" not accorded other citizens. He declared, by inference, that they must stand by for the time, at least, while the Administration centers major efforts on eliminating "the drags on prosperity."

Meant for Convention.

This reaffirmation of earlier indications that the President has gone to far, and will go no farther, in acceding to veterans' demands, was do mod significant because of the approach of the American Legion's annual convention at Miami. It was apparent that Mr. Roosevelt was anxious to take the wind out of the sails of any movement for greater compensation to the former soldiers.

Tucked adroitly into the brief speech was one paragraph of reassurance for business. In it the President replied indirectly to critics of his budget, declaring, in effect, that he is aware large "emergency" outlays must not get out of bounds. He said:

"It must remain our constant objective to eliminate the causes of depression and the drags of prosperity. It will cost money to do this. In the spending of this money we must have due regard for the good credit of the Government of the United States. That means that we can not spend at once or in any given year all that we could usefully spend."

Carefully avoiding any mention of the bonus by name, Mr. Roosevelt's address, nevertheless, was a blanket contradiction of the argument now coming rapidly to the fore that the time has come for payment of the bonus. He sugared this bitter dose for the bonus advocates with friendly words of confidence in their patriotism.

Forgotten People.

In his speech, which was delivered in characteristic, intimate fashion in the crisp autumn sunshine, the President gave chief emphasis to the needs of what he called the forgotten people who live in the back eddies of life. He said he was appalled by the magnitude of the task ahead in improving their lot.

A reference to slum conditions appeared to hint at a coming program for rehousing many of those who live in tenements.

"For many years," Mr. Roosevelt said, "we have seen a constantly growing realization of the fact that any large or small group which lacks the elementary necessities of proper food, of decent housing, of adequate medical attention, of essential education, drags down the level of the country as a whole and retards its progress."

He made plain he was speaking not only of city slums but of the pitiful conditions under which many live in small towns and in the country.

"But we have failed to realize the existence of the underprivileged who are present and largely forgotten in practically every one of the more than 3,000 counties of the 48

2,556-Mile Seaplane Sets Non-Stop Record

Trieste, Italy, Oct. 19 (AP).—Officials of the Monfalcone Airport received a radio report today from Massaua, Eritrea, that an Italian seaplane, piloted by Mario Stoppani, had landed there, completing a 2,556-mile nonstop flight. If the record is confirmed, the flight will be a new world's distance record for seaplanes. The present record is held by the American Navy air squadron of six planes commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Knefler McGinnis and Mark A. Mitscher, who last January flew from San Francisco to Oahu, Hawaiian Islands, a distance of 2,494 miles.

Gold Entente Is Held a Guide To U.S. Policies

Farm Conference in Rome Also May Influence New Trade Treaties.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

American monetary and trade experts, it was revealed yesterday, are closely watching two European meetings in the belief that they might detect from developments there barometers indicating the course which this country must follow in the money and international commerce fields.

The meetings are the conference at Brussels of representatives of the gold bloc nations, which convened yesterday for the purpose of devising means of stimulating trade among countries adhering to gold, and the International Institute of Agriculture, which meets Monday at Rome.

Out of either of these meetings, but espeically from that now in session in Brussels, may come decisions that will have an important bearing on what the United States proposes to do in respect to negotiating reciprocal trade agreements and possible further devaluation of the dollar, it is contended.

The United States is participating in the meeting at Rome and the Agriculture Department has submitted a memorandum as a basis of discussion on "trade barriers, commercial treaties and planned world economy." This will be laid before the institute by Henry C. Taylor, permanent American delegate to the institute.

Note Suggests Line.

This memorandum does not go beyond suggesting the line which discussions at Rome might take, but it recognizes as an important factor in such explorations "international monetary cooperation as a means of eliminating one of the principal motives existing at the present time for the imposition of trade barriers."

The memorandum also raises the question of whether bilateral commercial agreements which affect the diversion of existing trade instead of increasing international commerce are wise and if so whether any changes should be made in the most-favored-nation agreements now in existence.

This latter question has come sharply to the front within the last week as a result of Germany's action in giving one year's notice of termination of the commercial treaty between the United States and the Berlin government because of objection to the "most-favored-nation" clause. Secretary of State Cordell Hull subsequently indicated his opposition to trade pacts and moves outside of the framework of most-favored-nation treatment.

The question of trade pacts between a small group of nations, excluding the outside world, also is prominent in the discussions at Brussels. The purpose of that meeting is to lower tariffs, quota restrictions and other trade barriers on goods passing between the gold bloc countries. The most-favored-nation principle is an obstacle to such an agreement and it remains to be seen how the gold bloc will overcome it.

Economic advisers to this government, however, point out the possibility that developments at Brussels and at Rome, along with the world-wide tendency for one nation to grant special favors to another, in exchange for some concession, may eventually force the United States to revise its attitude toward the most-favored-nation principle.

Gold Challenges Dollar.

The meeting of commercial spokesmen of France, Italy, The Netherlands, Switzerland, Belgium, Luxemburg and Poland at Brussels is regarded here as another effort of the gold bloc to challenge the dollar and sterling countries and to deprive them of some of the trade gains the latter have realized through currency depreciation.

The suggestion has come from Europe that the motive behind the meeting is to force Great Britain back to the gold standard by holding out to that nation trade advantages for taking such action. British spokesmen, however, reiterated that their policy is to keep sterling independent of other currencies.

Meanwhile in the Far East a swiftly moving trade and currency war is raging, set off by the American silver purchase policy. Chinese currency has been wildly fluctuating as the Nanking government took steps to keep the depreciated yen of Japan from attracting its trade. Japan, according to the cables, is taking steps for further depreciation of the yen as a countermove to Chinese action.

The race of the last few days to depreciate Far Eastern currencies, it is explained, may have repercussions throughout the world, especially if the British force down the pound to retain their Oriental trade. In that event the United States, with its huge stabilization fund, may be tempted to exert pressure to keep down the value of the dollar in foreign exchange.

Although this Government gave China no comfort in the exchange of diplomatic correspondence made public earlier this week, it is possible that the Treasury is tempering its silver purchases to the Chinese situation. A thick veil of secrecy shrouds the silver purchases, but it has been rumored the Treasury is moving cautiously.

This report, however, appears to find confirmation in the figures for recent silver imports revealed yesterday by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Commerce Department, although such statistic can not be taken as an accurate gauge of Government purchases abroad.

Silver imports for the two weeks ended October 12 were valued at $4,554,446, compared with $8,134,057 for the two weeks ended September 14. The value of silver imports for the two weeks ended September 28 was given as $12,420,212.

In the week ended October 5 imports of refined silver bullion from the United Kingdom totaled 2,311,-150 ounces, whereas in the week ended October 12 such imports totaled only 500,000 ounces of refined silver bullion. The Government has been making purchases in the London silver market.

Digest Poll Cheers G. O. P., but Privately Party Holds Out Little Hope.

By Raymond Clapper

As is only natural, Republicans are cheering over the Literary Digest poll which shows a loss of favor for President Roosevelt. Privately, neither they nor other informed persons have any such hopes as the Digest poll would indicate. In fact, some Republicans would just as soon skip this election and go on to the next one.

* * * *

Soon the Republicans will place on exhibition a fledgling specimen of a rare species, a Republican who has been elected to the House this fall. There is only one in captivity. He is former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, who bounced a smug Democrat out of a seat in the House. That justly celebrated gentleman from Maine is about to go to Ohio to speak for Representative Chester C. Bolton, co-chairman of the Republican joint Senatorial-Congressional campaign committee. Not even well-informed Democrats think Bolton is in any serious danger. But being one of the most alert leaders on the Republican side, he is taking no chances.

The mystery of Dr. Rex Tugwell's trip to Europe still remains unsolved. It was denied he was shipped out of the country to divert attention from him during the political campaign. Also, although he caught his boat with a process server at his heels, it was denied he left to avoid having to testify in the Hawaiian sugar suit, which was tried here recently with Secretary Wallace on the stand explaining that he could not answer many questions because Dr. Tugwell had handled the matters involved.

To all suggestions that either of these situations prompted his departure, the Administration insisted that the only reason Dr. Tugwell went to Europe was to attend the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome. But the institute meetings do not begin until next Monday, whereas Dr. Tugwell sailed on a first-class ship more than five weeks ago—on September 12. He could have made many speeches for the New Deal after that date and still have reached Rome in time.

Agents of the House committee investigating bondholders' protective committees have discovered a situation in Detroit which they regard as in urgent need of being aired. They have recommended that the committee go into this matter at once. In their investigations thus far the committee has found numerous instances of a heartless form of depression racketeering in which misnamed bondholders' protective committees, charged with salvaging as much as possible out of a collapsed investment, have squandered what was left in large fees and heavy administrative expense.

Big Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, never overlooks an opportunity to emphasize that his organization is taking in more money than it is putting out. He was asked if he would follow the example of numerous other Administration officials and write a book.

"You would have to write it in red ink, wouldn't you?" Jones was asked.

"No, sir," he fired back. "We don't know what red ink is around here. When I write anything I use black ink."

Coming events cast their shadows before, as the philosopher said, but sometimes the shadows are indistinct. That was the case with a historic event some years ago, as the picture appears, embalmed in the files of The Washington Post of five years ago today.

Headlines picture a thriving, happy world with unbounded hope ahead.

President Hoover left to participate in the fiftieth anniversary of Edison's discovery of the incandescent light . . . Aviation companies were discussing the posibility of transcontinental all-air service with an overnight stop at Kansas City . . . The celebrated average man, Mr. Roy L. Gray, of Iowa, appeared in Washington in person and, as a small-town merchant who had never enjoyed the blessings of NRA, he found all well with the world . . . Virginia Methodists were denouncing drinking in the wicked National Capital, where, they reported, women were serving liquor . . . An indignant parson leaped to his feet and shouted, "Give 'em hell!" . . . Young John Coolidge was reported to be helping his bride with the housework . . . Inquiring investors were advised to hold well-known stocks for the long pull . . . Steel closed at 209; A. T. & T., at 281; General Electric, at 339 . . . Albert B. Fall rested his case in the trial for bribery over Teapot Dome . . . An editorial on "Man and Machine" stated that the American workman was the most efficient and productive in the whole world and that his standard of living was high and his hours of work short and that still further progress in this direction might be expected—as proved to be the case in regarding his hours of work, which were soon cut in millions of cases to none at all.

A short New York item on page 4 reported that on the previous day "Stock Raid Nears Turnover Record; 3,488,100 Shares Sold in Two-Hour Session Under Bear Drive." That routine news item failed to cast any shadow at all over the adjoining picture of the candy maids who entertained at a bazaar in Pythian Temple.

Farley Is Aping Don Quixote In Politics, Says Harry Nice

Postmaster General Tilting at Windmills by Injecting Self Into Maryland Fight, G. O. P. Candidate Holds.

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 19 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley's comment on the Maryland State campaign was termed the "adventure of a political Don Quixote who is tilting at political windmills" today by Harry W. Nice, Republican gubernatorial candidate.

Nice, in a statement, said he took "pleasure in extending to Mr. Farley the well-known Southern hospitality of the State, but that "his political advice * * * is not desired, nor do I think it will be followed."

The Republican candidate, touring Wicomico County, stopped off here to assail Farley's prediction last night before the Prince Georges Democratic central committee, that Gov. Ritchie, the Democratic nominee, would carry the State in November by the "greatest majority ever accorded him."

Scores Farley Tactics.

"It is pertinent," he said, "to take note of the fact that Postmaster General James A. Farley, the great exponent of purity in politics, has come into the Maryland campaign, in which there are no National issues, in an attempt to bolster up the cause of the present State administration.

"On previous occasions, when Mr. Farley has injected himself into the campaigns of other States and through his National prestige assumed a dictatorial role, his efforts have met with consistent failure.

"His political advice is not desired, nor do I think it will be followed. I rather apprehend that having assumed the role of a modern Don Quixote, he comes adventuring into our State tilting at political windmills which do not exist.

Sees Regime Tottering.

"Long claiming to be a proponent of State's rights, the present State administration has always opposed Federal interference in matters pertaining to Maryland. Now, however, in a time of political distress, it has called for help from any source and is only too glad to grasp at the life-line flung to it by Mr. Farley.

"And it is significant that the present State administration, long dilatory about accepting Federal financial assistance offered for the needy and unemployed, does not hesitate to accept political assistance when it realizes that the dynasty at Annapolis is tottering, but, in this instance political assistance of a doubtful nature."

2 Big Dairies Back 9-Cent Milk Plan

ital have been the subject of several investigations. One conclusion of the investigating bodies was that the producers of milk for Washington got a higher price than did the dairy farmers of any other section in the entire country.

Promise of Mr. Brawner was to support the plan to have surplus milk distributed to relief families at 9 cents or less a quart, Commissioner Allen said.

The Commissioner estimated that relief families now use 19,000 quarts of milk per day. He estimated that the Embassy Dairy offer to cut the cost per quart from 13 to 11 cents would mean an increased consumption in relief families of several thousands gallons. The Commissioner estimated, also, that a further reduction in price to 9 cents or less a quart would mean a greater increase in milk consumption.

Wife Is Acquitted In Slaying of Rival

Wichita Falls, Tex., Oct. 19 (AP). Mrs. Wilma Ann Harrison, 30-year-old mother, was acquitted here today of a murder charge for the shooting of Mrs. Cora Hawthorne, alleged paramour of her estranged husband, in a downtown department store August 4. The jury took only three ballots.

Mrs. Harrison said she shot after the woman reached for a heavy bottle when the two met.

Police Hurl Tear Gas To Rout Strike Pickets

Racine, Wis., Oct. 19 (AP).—Police used tear gas today to break up a concentration of 200 pickets who were preventing office workers from entering the Chicago Rubber Clothing Co. plant, where a strike is in effect.

One picket was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct. He was accused of striking a worker.

Huey Long Associate Indicted on Tax Charge

New Orleans, Oct. 19 (AP).—Abe L. Shushan, a close political associate of Senator Huey P. Long, was indicted today by a Federal grand jury on a charge of evading income tax.

The indictment charged Shushan evaded income tax payments aggregating $53,919.34 for 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1932. The indictment charged the amount on which this sum was due was $390,628.77.

Ickes Attacks Mellon, Reed In Pittsburgh

Declares New Deal Is Only Issue in Pennsylvania Election.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 19 (AP).—Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes tonight carried the weight of the Roosevelt Administration into the bitter Pennsylvania political campaign with a declaration that the New Deal is the only issue.

Ickes said the Republican party no longer is the "party of Abraham Lincoln, devoted to the welfare of the average man and woman," but one in which "wealth and special privilege are its chief concern."

He turned on Andrew W. Mellon, three times Secretary of the Treasury and for years a stalwart of Republicanism in Pennsylvania, and charged:

"He was one of those chiefly responsible for the crash of 1929 * * * and one of the largest contributors to the slush fund that has served to lubricate the political machine that has made possible the reactionary Republican majority in this State."

Includes Reed in Attack.

Of Senator David A. Reed, fiery critic of New Deal policies, whom he termed "the lugubrious Senator Reed," the Secretary said:

"With mourning band on the left arm and a bit of extra crepe for a hatband, he loves to go from place to place bemoaning the loss of liberties of rich clients whom he assumes to be people and lugubriously predicting early fall of the Republic since it no longer is in the safe and possessive grasp of Mr. Mellon and his associates."

Himself a native of the Keystone State, Ickes said of the "old deal:"

"This State, that is so dear to all of us, has stood out among all other States as an example of an exploiting minority fattening upon the miseries and oppressions of a great but helpless people.

"Slaves, or at least semislaves of a cruel industrialism, workmen have suffered political slavery also."

Jabs at Liberty League.

The Secretary said there are men who express a "hypocritical concern that the American people are being deprived of their liberties by this Administration."

"Some of these gentlemen are members of the 'Liberty League'," said Ickes. "I would like to know which one of them has ever protested the corrupt political practices that have been exposed in this State on more than one occasion?"

Winding up his speech before the Hungry Club, a nonpartisan forum, Ickes said:

"To my way of thinking, the New Deal is entitled to a vote of confidence at the coming election. That is the only issue involved."

Japan Will Ask Naval Recognition

That, apparently, is the stumbling block in the path to an agreement. Neither the United States nor Britain has given any hint it would offer any such promise before discussing the Japanese technical plan.

Nevertheless, there have been clear indications the two countries, while standing together for continuing the substance of present treaties, would accept some sort of compromise to save Japan's face.

Informal Proposal.

The Americans already have suggested informally an agreement mutually satisfactory to the three powers to recognize the principle of equality.

Both Americans and Japanese, after their first conference, remarked on the pleasant atmosphere that prevailed.

The Americans have completed their plans and are ready for the formal start of the conversations, expected next week. Yamamoto and Matsudaira are still busy applying the finishing touches to their plan, believed to provide reduction of offensive weapons and limitation of navies on the total global tonnage basis.

Yamamoto today paid courtesy visits to the French and Italian naval attaches who are observing the discussions.

U. S. Is Denied Writ In Iowa Milk Fight

Court Declares AAA Can't Regulate Trade in State.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 19 (AP). Federal Judge Charles A. Dewey today held the Government's contention that "all dealings in basic commodities affect interstate commerce "tended to emasculate the commerce clause of the Constitution in denying it an injunction against a Des Moines dairy concern.

The judge ruled that the Secretary of Agriculture had no authority to license or regulate the business of a dairy conducted entirely within a State.

The Government had requested a temporary injunction against the Hillcrest Dairy, alleging it had violated provisions of the AAA and the milk license promulgated under the statute for the Des Moines marketing area.

Court Documents Revealed Missing

the amount shown on the paper will vary in some instances from the amount of the fine on the records of the clerk sitting on the case.

It was pointed out that the present investigation, which goes back to 1932, is based upon the system of court recording which was urged by the general accounting office in 1928. The Police Court records until then were kept in such a haphazard manner nothing could be learned, although one old-time employe lost his job as a result of the 1928 investigation.

The present system revolves around the "information" system. The information paper contains all the pertinent data on the case. It is one printed page on which the name, charge and other data are placed, together with the ultimate disposition of the case.

It is simple to extract these papers from the files, for they are no part of a permanent record or docket. Thus, if a bondsman had a case coming up, and the prisoner was unavailable, it was not too difficult to have either the information removed or the bond slip destroyed.

Inquiry to Last Weeks.

The three special investigators of the Department of Justice have let it be known they expect to be occupied with the work for weeks. Many hundreds of cases are handled in the Police Court daily.

Wrath of Police Court officials was stirred when it was learned one bondsman in particular had several continuances in a case where his client was a fugitive. This case was called for dismissal, and when it was learned the judge's clerk had auhorized numerous continuances without his superior's authority, an investigation was begun.

[illegible] have been instructed to make a complete investigation of the whole court. They have been told to look into everything and to make certain all records are in order or find out why. Permission to examine the records was granted by Presiding Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

Estimates of the amount involved in suspected irregularities are purely speculative. Meanwhile, members of the District Bar Associatoin are hopeful the entire Police Court plan can be revamped to meet present-day needs.

AAA Takes Step To Win Support For Alteration

Processors Who Defeated Amendments in June Will Be Consulted.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

In a move to gain support for new AAA amendments at the next session of Congress, Farm Administration officials will consult crop processors who successfully opposed the changes on Capitol Hill last June, it was learned yesterday.

Chester Davis, farm administrator, has been instructed by Secretary Wallace to sound out sentiment at a series of meetings with processors, shippers and brokers dealing in agricultural products. The contents of the revised amendments, however, have been closely guarded so far.

In the words of the Secretary himself, the defeat of the changes at the last session proved the department must be more "tactful" in explaining its purposes. He hopes to reassure private business in advance this time and head off as much opposition as possible.

The suggested alterations are regarded by Wallace as of prime importance. It is not altogether unlikely that he would consent to modification of the amendments before they are reintroduced if such a course should enhance their chances of success.

Observers attached significance to the new policy of the department in handling the amendments. It was recalled that the processors were not consulted when the original changes were drafted. The result was that private interests fought the proposed legislation until the death stab was delivered in the closing hours of Congress.

Despite the more conciliatory attitude of the agricultural high command, it was learned they do not plan any conference with Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, who led the fight against the amendments at the last session.

The ravages of the drought and the reduction of crops through benefit payments to farmers so substantially slashed huge surpluses of many farm products that opponents for a time believed Wallace might indefinitely postpone reintroduction of the amendments. He recently indicated, however, that the changes would be resubmitted at the next session.

Throughout the last session Wallace and Davis insisted their proposals were mere "clarifying" changes of the act and would not grant any new power.

Congressional enemies protested the legislation would make Wallace a czar over farmers by permitting him to fix prices and regulate buying and selling of agricultural products.

Byrd hurled charges of attempted farm "dictatorship" and "Hitlerism." He contended the amendments would vest Wallace with "arbitrary power to say who can live and who must die."

Navy Reduction Doomed to Fail, Robinson Fears

Senate Leader Declares Europe Is Seething With Discontent.

By Robert C. Albright.

Frank pessimism over chances for a satisfactory 1935 world naval agreement was expressed yesterday by Joseph T. Robinson, Senate Democratic leader and delegate to the London Naval Conference in 1930.

Back from a European vacation jaunt, the Arkansas Senator and Administration pillar spoke bluntly about prospects for an understanding on further limitation of naval armament, as preliminary London discussions got under way.

"I regret to say that the difficulties in the way appear to me to be very numerous and very great," he told newspapermen.

"It will be very difficult under prevailing conditions to work out an arrangement for a further reduction of naval arms that will be satisfactory to the United States."

Arms Building Stressed.

This expression came as representatives of Japan and the United States exchanged views in London in advance of bilateral conversations opening next week with Great Britain, building foundations for the 1935 Naval Conference.

Robinson picture Europe as "seething with discontent" and diverting every resource to the building of armament.

"There are many sore spots and much fear," he said.

"I do not wish to exaggerate the difficulties, but it seems to me that frankness and a fair understanding of the situation are essential in the beginning to the accomplishment of substantial results.

"Unquestionably, some of the European governments whose budgets are out of balance and whose sources of revenue are very limited are employing their resources to increase armaments."

Apparently in robust health, declaring himself in "fine fettle," Senator Robinson discussed briefly international economic and armament issues preliminary to leaving Europe and her problems behind and plunging actively into the fall Congressional campaign.

Trade Outlook.

He was only mildly optimistic over the outlook for reciprocal trade agreements, pointing out "the political problems of Europe undoubtedly tend to intensify and to freeze in a sense the economic situation."

He spoke in his usual carefully measured phrases.

"There exists a general feeling in the countries I have visited that trade restrictions and barriers more than anything else are hampering recovery," he said.

"In some instances the political problems seem inseparable from those pertaining to economics. There is a belief that reciprocal trade agreements of a wholesome and helpful character may be worked out, and I think some progress is being made.

"There has come some settling down, but the process must go further before far-reaching consequences may be realized."

Court Hits NRA In Greif Action

Judge Coleman in Baltimore Charges 'Total Lack of Cooperation.'

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—United States District Judge William C. Coleman today charged NRA authorities in Washington with "a total lack of cooperation" with his court in its effort to settle the differences between the recovery administration and L. Greif & Bro., clothing manufacturers.

Despite an agreement reached between NRA authorities in Washington and the Greif concern, Judge Coleman refused to dismiss his order restraining NRA representatives from interfering with Greif until NRA attorneys came into his court and explained their actions.

Judge Coleman signed the order, which applied only to NRA authorities in Maryland because of jurisdictional limitations, last July. At that time members of the NRA legal staff from Washington were in court but told him that they came merely as observers. Immediately thereafter the NRA ordered the Men's Clothing Code Authority, at New York, to send no more Blue Eagle labels to the Greif concern.

Father's 'Night' Is Celebrated At High School

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Fathers of students of Washington and Lee High School were entertained last night at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association in the school auditorium by the members of the football squad, who demonstrated plays. The meeting was designated as Father Night.

H. T. Moncure, principal of Alexandria High School, spoke on "Modern Trends in Education." He said conditions are changeable as well as changing with life and the ways of meeting life. The school is not only expected to meet these changes but to foresee them and prpare for them. The school of yesterday offered from four to ten classes from subjects of a content type, but it did not attempt to meet even simple recognized differences with the individual, nor did it attempt to recognize the fact that those things which competently meet present-day situations may not be applicable tomorrow.

Yesterday we did not think it was necesary to divide children according to their ages; then it changed to ability. Now we teach in such a manner that we can manage to give each his capacity by requiring or expecting additional achievement levels within a given class.

Another change of the old teaching which ignored a phase of pedagogy which is now being given considerable attention is the period of adolescence. The social and physical program must provide a wise and large opportunity for sublimation of the sex instinct to worthwhile channels. Physically, the heart, lungs, and the rest of the vital organs need special attention at this period. Too vigorous exercise is detrimental.

The new type of school has an unique part to play in furnishing adjustments and making itself flexible enough to handle competently the varying types with which it is called upon to deal. As has been said, "the adolescent should be given as much freedom as he can use wisely." It is your job and my job to determine the limitations of the meaning of the word wise.

The membership committee reported that the membership has passed the 450 mark. President Carlton K. Lewis presided.

W. W. Burnett, of Ballston, has been named the first president of an Arlington County post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Other officers will be elected at a meeting to be held next Thursday at the home of Walter Johnson, 418 South Chestnut street, Lyon Park.

The new post will not be named until a suitable name of some Arlington County veteran killed in line of duty is secured.

Seat Pleasant to Dedicate Field to J. L. Duffey.

The Seat Pleasant Volunteer Fire Department and Community Welfare Association will honor the memory of the late James Lucian Duffey when it dedicates its athletic field at Seat Pleasant, Md., tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. Mr. Duffy, a former chief of the Seat Pleasant Fire Department, died in April.

Radcliffe, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate from Maryland; chiefs of the Washington, Baltimore, Annapolis and Alexandria fire departments; officers and members of the Prince Georges County Firemen's Association, the Maryland State Firemen's Association and Columbia Volunteer Company, No. 4, of Alexandria. C. M. Mace is chairmen of the committee in charge.

Golf Clubs Stolen; Suspect Arrested

$1,500 Loot Is Recovered in Pawn Shops.

Gordon A. Fidler, 22, of Silver Spring, Md., has been arrested on a charge of larceny by Sergt. Guy L. Jones of Montgomery County Police Station. Fidler was booked for preliminary hearing in the County Police Court at Rockville, on November 9, and was released on $1,000 bond.

He is alleged to have taken golf clubs, balls and other equipment valued at $1,500, most of which belonged to club members, from the Indian Spring Country Club on Colesville pike, near Silver Spring.

Virtually all the property has been located in pawn shops in the vicinity and in Baltimore, the police said.

Strike Blamed For Large Drop In Employment

September Figures Show Jobless at Level of October, 1931.

Chiefly as a result of the textile strike, National unemployment increased in September to the October, 1931, depression level, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins announced yesterday. Normally, September employment shows a gain over August.

The Secretary said an estimated decrease of 246,000 workers in the textile industries turned what might have been a gain of 116,000 workers into a loss.

Encouraging gains were noted in the retail trade, Miss Perkins said, despite the employment slump.

Industrial employment fell 4.7 per cent and pay rolls 6.8 per cent last month, as compared with August. The woolen and worsted goods industries decreased 48 per cent, the cotton goods 41.4 per cent, the silk and rayon industry 21.3 per cent and the textile dyeing and finishing plants, 9.5 per cent.

Gain in Washington.

Industrial employment gained 4.1 per cent in Washington, rising to 36,324, while pay rolls rose 3.2 per cent, or to a weekly average of $846,829.

Secretary Perkins indorsed the President's plan for emphasizing low-cost housing construction in next year's relief program and expressed the view it would do much to lessen unemployment. She said she favored both direct building by the Federal Government and loans to private industry for housing construction.

The most pronounced employment gains in September occurred in wholesale and retail trade and in the coal mining, building construction, dyeing and cleaning, and power and light industries.

Declines in Four.

Important declines occurred in the iron and steel, hardware, automobile, and boot and shoe industries. The latter three losses were said to be seasonal.

Employment increases occurred in 29 States and the District. Delaware topped the list, while Rhode Island showed the largest loss because of the textile strike.

Public works provided jobs for 565,000 persons in September, or an increase of 35,000 over August. The works division of the FERA employed 1,375,000, a gain of 160,000, and the Civilian Conservation Corps absorbed 335,000.

Road-building projects accounted for an additional 250,000, and RFC loan jobs for 18,000.

Episcopalians Vote To Remain 'Protestant'

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 19 (AP). The fifty-first triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church today rejected a proposal to eliminate the word "Protestant" from the church's name.

Evenly divided sentiment on the "high church" vs. "low church" issue was reflected in the vote by which the House of Deputies defeated the measure, 234 to 207, after hot debate.

Mount Vernon Care Stressed

Ladies' Association Makes Annual Tour of Historic Estate.

Preservation of the plantation buildings and the productiveness of the soils on the historic Mount Vernon estate have been given special consideration this year, the Mount Vernon Ladies Association was told on the annual inspection tour.

The wood foundations of several of the outbuildings have been replaced and treated to prevent further inroads of the termites or white ants. An inspection of the buildings last spring revealed the ants were eating the interior of the wooden foundations, weakening them so they were liable to collapse. This work was under the direction of Dr. Charles Killum, of Harvard.

Productiveness of the Martha Washington Gardens is being insured by scientific treatment. Roots of the box hedge had been so extensive they were too great a drain on the fertility of the soil, making the treatment necessary.

The inspection tour was completed yesterday by a committee of the association composed of the regent, Miss Alice Richards, and the vice regents from Wisconsin, New Hampshire, Iowa, South Carolina, Virginia, Vermont and Connecticut.

The committee surveyed the work accomplished under the direction of Col. Harrison H. Dodge, superintendent of the estate, the last summer, and made further plans for activities pending the next meeting of the association, in May.

Club to Clothe Prince Georges Needy Children

Federation Decides to Aid Pupils; Hear Reports of Charity Work.

The Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs will undertake to supply clothing and shoes to needy school children there, it was decided yesterday

At the semiannual meeting, held yesterday at the University of Maryland, the federation heard reports of affiliated clubs which have been engaged in charity work.

Mrs. G. W. S. Musgrave, of Laurel, Md., president, said that the action was taken to concentrate the charity efforts on the outfitting of the school children, which has become of vital importance to county welfare organizations.

In connection with this the organization heard Miss Charlotte Wilcox, county relief administrator, and Miss Agnes Duval, county social worker.

The federation also decided to protest the rezoning to a commercial site of the plot of ground on which the Bladensburg Peace Cross stands. The action has been requested of the Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission on the ground it is legally private property.

The resolution was introduced by the Cheverly Woman's Club, through its president, Mrs. Henry Naylor, and was adopted unanimously.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, of College Park, president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Peyton Whelan, State director. The 11 State chairmen who live in Prince Georges County, were introduced.

Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, editor of the Maryland Club Woman, official organ of the State federation, told of the magazine's activities.

communities would prove self-liquidating, Mr. Hopkins said it was undecided whether the farmsteads would be leased to their occupants or sold to them on long-time easy terms.

"We're not going to sell the homes to them for a year or so in any event," he said. "The minute we sold, another fellow could come along and buy up the property. That might provide an opening for real estate speculators. But whether we lease the houses to the families on a permanent basis, or sell them outright, the terms will be very, very cheap."

The community homes, he said, would be offered only to persons on relief rolls.

Plans for additional Government-financed housing in rural and suburban areas were disclosed by Subsistence Homesteads officials.

They said money had been allocated, from the $25,000,000 fund at their disposal, for 23 projects which would not be announced in detail until the land for them had been puchased. States in which these homesteads are to be built include Maryland, with an allotment of $500,000.

Roosevelt Talk Shatters Hope For Bonus Now

Underprivileged Are to Come First, Word at Roanoke.

Definite Obligation.

Improvement of their lot, he added, was a definite obligation and he was confident war veterans would be among the first to recognize this as a fact.

As he stood on a raised platform before the new $1,700,000 veterans' hospital, the Chief Executive recalled that these "forgotten" people "have no good food, splendid hospitals for their care" or clothes or attention such as the veterans command.

Things are somewhat better now, Mr. Roosevelt went on, but those in good circumstances are too apt to forget that one cause of the depression is the very existence of this "definite drag against the return of prosperity." Veterans realize that this underprivileged class should come first, he continued, not only because of their patriotism, but also because—First, both the Federal and State governments have given former service men unusual privileges; secondly, because "it has been amply demonstrated" that the veterans are in better position than any other group from the standpoint of employment and annual income.

Mr. Roosevelt arrived at 4 p. m. aboard a special train from Washington. He rode at the head of an automobile procession through long lanes of cheering Virginians from Roanoke to Salem, and thence to the new hospital plant, which is midway between the two neighboring cities.

Compliments Virginia.

Departing occasionally from his text, Mr. Roosevelt spoke feelingly of "lovely Virginia" and paused to compliment Virginia Polytechnic Institute, represented by its band, and Virginia Military Academy, which also had a part in the exercises. He spoke also of the new hospital, constructed in Georgian style, which will provide 472 beds and serve a radius of 150 miles.

Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, whose efforts were responsible partly for the location of the plant here, presided at ceremonies. Other speakers were Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veteran affairs, who remarked that the Government now has $127,000,000 invested in hospitals and soldiers' homes, and Gov. George Peery, who presented the President.

Besides the speakers, Mr. Roosevelt was accompanied to Roanoke by Postmaster General James A. Farley, First Assistant Postmaster General W. W. Howes, Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd, Ambrose O'Connell, executive assistant to the Postmaster General; Emil Hurja, of the Democratic National Committee, and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired, and Mrs. Grayson.

Shakes With Rebel.

As the train paused at Lynchburg, home of Senator Glass, the President made a gesture of warm friendship for the Virginian who has been caustic in his criticism of the New Deal. Stepping onto the rear platform before thousands gathered at the station, he put his arm about the Senator, whom he affectionately calls an "unreconstructed Rebel," and shook his hand. The crowd cheered.

Smaller throngs gathered all along the route across Virginia. At Sweetbriar, home of the girls' school, scores crowded about his private car. At the Elks National Home, which was dedicated by the late President Harding, a long line of men waved flags.

Leaving Roanoke tonight, the Presidential train started across the State again, en route to Williamsburg, where tomorrow the President will receive an honorary degree and make a short talk. The occasion will be the inauguration of John Stewart Bryan as president of the College of William and Mary. Mr. Roosevelt will then motor to Yorktown to begin the voyage home aboard the yacht Sequoia.

Liquor Policy 'Sins' Laid to White House

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 19 (AP). "Sins" which he said will "never be forgotten or forgiven" were laid today at the White House doorstep in a fiery address by Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Vigorously assailing the Administration's liquor policy, the churchman told the 152d Virginia Methodist Conference that the Government had broken its promise to prohibit the corner saloon.

"The Old Testament tells us that certain Kings of Israel made Israel to sin," he said. "Well, it can be said of the present Administration in Washington that it has made church people to sin, and it will never be forgotten or forgiven."

Seiners Capture Horse-Face Fish Weighing 1 Ton

Elizabeth City, N. C., Oct. 19 (AP). A sea creature, 10 feet long and weighing about 2,000 pounds, was held captive in a hastily constructed pool near here today, while inhabitants of the region awaited the arrival of a representative of the State Museum to identify it.

A party of fishermen caught the creature in a seine, and hauled it ashore with ropes attached to automobiles.

It is 3 feet across the back, 18 inches thick, and has a fan-shaped tail. The skin is dark brown and apparently very thin, with some traces of hair on it. The face is long, resembling that of a horse. It has no teeth.

Text of the President's Speech

The text of President Roosevelt's address at Roanoke, Va., yesterday follows:

In coming to Roanoke to take part in the dedication of the latest addition to our chain of veterans hospitals, I do not seek to enumerate or to catalogue the many steps which have been taken by your Federal Government to care for its veterans of many wars.

Most of you in this great audience are from this neighborhood and in the years to come the men who will occupy this hospital will be your friends and your neighbors. I commend them to your care.

You see before you today a monument which is representative of the National policy that the Government is seeking to give aid not only to veterans but also to hundreds of thousands of other citizens—men, and women and children who, handicapped by environment or by circumstances, lack today what reasonable people call the essentials of modern civilization.

Lack of Necessities Holds Back Nation.

For many years we have seen a constantly growing realization of the fact that any large or small group which lacks the elementary necessities of proper food, of decent housing, of adequate medical attention, of essential education, drags down the level of the country as a whole and retards its progress.

In one sense these men and women and children are not forgotten for the very good reason that we have known of their existence and appreciated their plight for many years. In another sense, however, they have been forgotten, for it is only in recent years that Government has undertaken to help them on a National scale.

The further we go in our survey to find out who these people are and where they live, the more appalled I am by the magnitude of our task. Most of us know, in general terms, of the slum conditions which exist in many of our cities. Most of us know, from hearsay at least, of people who have lived for generations in back eddies remote from the active stream of life. But we have failed to realize the existence of the underprivileged who are present and largely forgotten in practically every one of the more than 3,000 counties of the 48 States of the Union.

The improvement of their hard lot is a definite obligation on all of our citizens, and I am confident that the veterans of our American wars will be among the first to recognize this fact.

Improvement Held Necessary for Future.

The improvement of their hard lot compels our immediate exertions, not only because of the individual human beings who suffer today, but, even more important to the future of America, because future generations of American citizens will become the descendants of those who are now in need. In this thought also the veterans of our wars will go along.

Let it be well remembered that the hundreds of thousands of men and women and children to whom I have referred, scattered throughout our Nation, have no splendid hospitals for their care, have no medical attention, such as we will provide here, have no good food and decent raiment, such as will be provided in this veterans' home; have no opportunities for adequate education, and can but suffer the ills of their lives according to their own individual circumstances.

You have heard it said that we must restore prosperity. You have heard some kind people say that the country is distinctly better off from a material point of view than it was last year. I am inclined to agree with them. Other people, who fail to think things through, forget that one cause of the depression which we are beginning to leave behind, was the very existence of hundreds of thousands of men, women and children who have been and continue to be a definite drag against the return of prosperity.

It must remain our constant objective to eliminate the causes of depression and the drags on prosperity. It will cost money to do this. In the spending of this money we must have due regard for the good credit of the Government of the United States. That means that we can not spend at once or in any given year all that we could usefully spend.

First Things First, Approved by Veterans.

I mentioned once upon a time that we must do first things first; the care of the disabled, the sick, the destitute and the starving is the first thing. To this the veterans of American wars give their approval in agreement with the overwhelming majority of our other citizens.

I make this statement in regard to the veterans of America, not only because I am confident of their patriotism and their understanding of our National needs, but also for two other reasons. The first is that our Federal Government and our State governments have given to them many privileges not accorded to others citizens, and the other reason is that it has been amply demonstrated that the veterans of the World War, today in the prime of life, are better off from the point of view of employment and of annual income than the average of any other great group of our citizens.

British Protest Seen in Gold Bloc Trade Alliance

Brussels, Oct. 19 (AP).—A possible British protest against schemes for helping trade among themselves was foreseen here today as Representatives of seven countries who base their money on gold got under way.

The gold bloc—Belgium, France, Holland, Switzerland, Luxembourg and Italy, with the last minute addition of Poland—had under consideration proposals submitted by France for increasing exports and deflating export prices among themselves.

By increasing the volume of trade among themselves, the nations represented hope to decrease competition from countries with depreciated currencies and avoid the necessity of devaluating their own currencies.

All schemes for such closer links among themselves, however, would bring them up against Britain's rights with all of them under the most favored-nation clauses of treaties.

President Wrong On War Veterans' Status, Says Hayes

Miami, Fla., Oct. 19 (AP).—Edward A. Hayes, National commander of the American Legion, today expressed disagreement with President Roosevelt that World War veterans are "better off from the point of view of employment and of annual income than the average of any other great group of citizens."

Commenting on a portion of the Chief Executive's address at Roanoke, Va., Hayes said:

"I can not agree with the observation made by the President 'that it has been amply demonstrated that the veterans of the World War are better off from the point of view of employment and of annual income than the average of any other great group of our citizens.

"The experience of those of us who have been devoting the past 15 years to the problems of the World War veterans has supplied us with ample proof to show that a vast majority are handicapped because of their war service.

"The loss of time, which they virtually donated to the Government; the interruption of their careers; the loss of their priority, and the decrease in their earning power in thousands of instances, due to disability, have permanently set them back of the average citizen."

Labor Board Denies Anthracite Union Aid

The National Labor Relations Board last night refused to intervene for the United Anthracite Miners of Pennsylvania, seeking status equal to that of the United Mine Workers of America.

A request of union representatives that the board urge its recognition by Pennsylvania coal operators was rejected by Edwin S. Smith, a board member. He criticized the organization for its failure to accept rulings of J. A. Gorman, umpire of the Anthracite Conciliation Board.

Alexandrian Pilots President's Train For Seventh Time

President Roosevelt yesterday became the seventh Chief Executive to ride behind the steady hand of Engineer Herbert C. Lynn, of Alexandria.

With never a scratch against his record, Mr. Lynn has turned in a 100 per cent performance for more than 40 years with the Southern Railroad. For that reason he was selected to pilot the Roosevelt special train which left Union Station yesterday morning for Roanoke. Railway officials related that he had also served as engineer for Presidents McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover.

A railroader since boyhood, Mr. Lynn enjoys excellent health at 68. He is married and has two daughters.

Bite Causes Rare Illness.

Carmi, Ill., Oct 19 (AP).—Two daughters of Albert Williams, one 3 years old and the other but 6 months, were near death today from a rare disease caused by a rat bite. Dr. R. C. Brown, who made the diagnosis, described the ailment as rare here, but common in Asiatic countries. The children were bitten in August, but the disease developed slowly, causing fever and glandular disorders.

Miss Perkins Edits New Publication

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins yesterday assumed the role of publisher in addition to her many other duties.

Copies of the first edition of "Labor Information Bulletin," a 20-page booklet, were released yesterday.

The monthly publication, Miss Perkins said, is written for the layman who wants to know what is going on in the labor and industrial fields. Among current articles were "How the Depression Affected 1,000 Employed Railway Workers," and "What Happened to Employment and Pay Rolls in August, 1934."

WASHINGTON'S EXCLUSIVE HEADQUARTERS FOR ROGERS PEET CLOTHING

Rogers Peet Tweedmoor Suits

When you think of clothing for hard wear, do you think of a fabric that might well be a second-cousin to cast iron? Rogers Peet changed all that when they invented their exclusive Tweedmoor Cloth—an all-wool fabric that will take all the rough usage you can give it, without any sacrifice to comfort or smart style. It gets that way because of the special wool that is used in the weaving, and the way it is woven—extra long wool fibers, extra tightly twisted. The result is a beautiful Scotch cheviot that is husky without being heavy or hard.

And when this cloth is hand-tailored by Rogers Peet into suits designed by Rogers Peet, the combination is something superb. Only Rogers Peet can produce Tweedmoor Suits, and only in this store can Washington men buy them. Priced at $65.

Preferred List Made Millions In Insull Deal

Prosecution Gives Names of Those Who Shared $2,299,000 Profit.

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—How a "preferred list" gleaming with "big names" took $2,299,000 in profits from one of Samuel Insull's companies which later failed was described in the Insull mail fraud trial today.

Participants in a syndicate organized in September, 1929, made that much, Assistant United States Attorney General Leslie E. Salter said, by selling stock to the Corporation Securities Co. of Chicago in January, 1930, at a profit of between 25 and 26 per cent on their subscriptions.

The "Middle West common and preferred syndicate" had some 300 members, according to P. J. Fallon, formerly an officer of Insull, Son & Co., which was the syndicate manager. They made total subscriptions of $147,000,000 he said, but statements he identified showed they had been asked to put up only 6 per cent of their subscriptions. The list of members was not read to the jury.

Defense Attorney Floyd E. Thompson had demanded that the full list be read, and in cross-examining Fallon, Thompson obtained testimony identifying seven firms and individuals. They and their subscriptions were:

"H. L. Doherty & Co., $1,000,000; A. G. Becker & Co., $2,000,000; Lehman Bros., $1,000,000; Owen D. Young, $500,000; the Credit Suisse, Zurich, $10,000,000; Baring Bros. & Co., Ltd., London, $5,000,000; N. M. Rothschild & Sons, Ltd., London, $1,000,000."

Also on the list, as it was first made public in an Insull hearing in 1932, were Gerard Swope, Eugene M. Stevens, Clement Studebaker, jr., Edward F. Swift, and Joseph Tumulty, who was President Wilson's secretary.

The syndicate collected $8,820,000 from its members and borrowed another $8,900,000 from banks, according to statements identified by the witness. Then Salter read minutes in which Insull arranged for the syndicate to sell $18,596,831 in stock to Insull Utility Investments, Inc., which in turn sold half of it to the new Corporation Securities Co. of Chicago. "They had to have a dumping ground," Salter commented.

Fallon identified checks, among them some to Insull and his son, also a defendant, as given to pay back the subscribers' contribution, "plus 25 per cent compensation."

fore the court at special term, it has been found that sufficient evidence has been shown to require the relator to be rendered to the State of New Jersey, there to stand trial.

Insists Evidence Sufficient.

"There is sufficient evidence in the record to sustain this finding and bring this cause within the authorities quoted.

"The order appealed from should be affirmed, and the stay vacated."

A temporary stay of extradition had been granted Hauptmann pending the appeal.

Fawcett, who appeared dazed as the opinion was read by Presiding Justice Edward R. Finch, said he would not appeal again.

"That would be useless in view of the fact that we have been unable to introduce new evidence," he commented.

The Court's three-page opinion was signed by all five justices.

"The question presented to us," it said, "is not to determine finally whether relator was present in or absent from the State of New Jersey at the time of the commission of the crime of murder with which he is charged.

"Upon that issue there is evidence, both direct and circumstantial, to show that the relator was present in the State of New Jersey. The latter, in turn, denied that he was present at the time and place of the crime, and has adduced evidence in support of an alibi.

"The relator moves to return the case to the justice at special term upon the ground that he has additional evidence in support of his contention that he was present at work in New York City from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon on March 1, 1932.

Conflict With Record.

"This contention is in conflict with documentary evidence already in the record. In any event, this additional evidence is cumulative and not in itself conclusive and there still exists a definite conflict of evidence upon this record.

"Out of this conflicting evidence arises a clear-cut issue of fact. Such issue should not be determined upon an appeal from an order rendering the custody of the relator to the demanding State, but should await the trial of the action. When conflicting evidence is present upon this issue, the latter also becomes a question to be determined upon the trial as is any other issue therein arising."

Fawcett in his plea for introduction of Furcht's affidavit said the man who was superintendent of construction at the hotel would testify Hauptmann was sent to him by an employment agency and that he worked March 1 and succeeding days.

Swope Hits Plan Of 30-Hour Week

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., said tonight that a compulsory 30-hour work week with a corresponding increase in wages would defeat its purpose of maintaining the high standards of American living.

New manufacturing methods and new inventions are the only practicable means of decreasing hours and increasing wage rates, Swope told the National Electrical Manufacturers Association convention.

The increased volume of employment attending a rigid reduction in hours would be only temporary, the industrialist said, larger pay rolls would kite selling prices, he theorized, which would reduce consumption and, completing the cycle, throw workmen back into the streets.

Two to Face Jury In Kidnap Inquiry

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Bronx County district attorney's office served grand jury subpenas tonight on two men who refused to answer questions on the kidnaping of Lewis Esposito, 23, son of a junk dealer. Esposito was released after he was held three days by his abductors, who had demanded $20,000.

Assistant District Attorney Edward Breslin issued the subpenas after Patsy Basclice, a cousin of the victim, and Thomas Litrento, also a junk dealer, declined to give any information.

Basclice was with Esposito when he returned home last night, but Breslin did not disclose Litrento's connection with the case. Police have been unable to learn whether the ransom was paid.

Lynch to Leave NRA; Successor Not Yet Named

E. R. Stettinius Appointed to Handle Major Personnel Affairs.

A new administrative officer probably will be named shortly by the National Recovery Industrial Recovery Board, it was learned yesterday.

Col. George A. Lynch, who was reappointed several weeks ago by the board after he won White House commendation for his work as administrative officer under Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA chief, has informed the new Blue Eagle governors he hopes to return to the Army November 1.

Another big business figure was brought into NRA yesterday with the appointment of Edward R. Stettinius, vice chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, to handle major personnel matters.

Announcement also was made of the appointment of Robert K. Straus, son of the American Ambassador to France, as deputy administrator in charge of the hotel code. He formerly was a special assistant to Gen. Johnson.

Judge Rules Marriage Legal For Children, Void for Mother

Justice Must be Served So His Honor Decides Two Ways.

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—The law did a couple of flipflops and backspins today. Justice had to be served, whether it was good law or not.

If Judge Erwin J. Hasten in Domestic Relations Court ruled one way, he would have stigmatized two children illegitimate. Had he ruled another way, their mother would face a bigamy charge. So he ruled both ways and canceled everything out.

Back in 1927 Emil Van Der Broeche and his sweetheart, now Mrs. Caroline Sirotzki, eloped to Crown Point, Ind., and bought themselves a marriage license. They thought that was all there was to a wedding, and lived for the next seven years, happily, as man and wife. In the course of events came daughter Caroline, now 6, and son Robert, now 4.

Last summer Mrs. Van Der Broeche discovered the marriage hadn't been legal, so she assumed she was free to be married properly, and left Van Der Broeche to wed John Sirotzki.

She took the youngsters along, and today brought their father into court charged with failure to support the children.

Judge Hasten, winking one eye, ruled the first marriage legal so far as the children were concerned; and winking the other, ruled that—so far as Mrs. Sirotzki was concerned—there was no first marriage.

Anyway, Van Der Broeche agreed to pay $5 a week to feed the children.

Luzon Island Swept By Second Typhoon

Manila, Oct. 20 (Saturday) (AP).—A new typhoon was believed to have struck the east central part of Luzon Island today, following closely the path of the furious storm that swept this area Tuesday, killing 87 persons and destroying the homes of some 21,000 others.

Telegraphic communication to the affected district was impossible, however, because the lines had been put out of commission by the previous storm.

Los Angeles Vote Fraud Investigation Launched

Los Angeles, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Los Angeles County grand jury today opened its investigation into charges of wholesale fraudulent registrations for the November election, to determine whether criminal angles are involved.

Investigators of the Los Angeles Republican Assembly declare more than 100,000 registrations in the city and county are illegal.

Prayer Is Universal

Jesus Deemed It So Essential That He Taught It to His Disciples, Real Religion Not a Matter of Display.

By William T. Ellis.

Once, long ago, upon my first visit to India, I saw what was then to me a strange sight, a company of white-turbaned men in a public park of Calcutta, rising and falling in unison, like windrows—sometimes prostrate on their faces, sometimes kneeling, sometimes standing, with their hands in identical position. I had never before seen Moslems engaged in public prayer, and their heedlessness of the hurrying world about them deeply impressed me.

I had not gone many months from my homeland, on my first trip around the globe, before I learned that this is a praying world. On the ship across the Pacific I found the Japanese up early to greet the rising sun with a prayer; and later I followed praying pilgrims to the top of Mount Fujiyama, and many another shrine. All over the island empire I came across shrines and sacred trees to which prayer-inscribed rags had been tied—a usage that persists over pretty much all Asia.

I saw the Tibetans turning their prayer wheels, and I kept one as a souvenir of my visit with the Dalai Lama, along with a Buddhist rosary. India is a land of prayers. In Palestine I have gone with the Jews on Friday to the Wailing Wall, where the intensity of religious devotion is concentrated. Within the walls of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre I have seen the rapture of prayer by Christians of many creeds. In St. Peter's, in Rome, in St. Stephen's, in Vienna, St. Isaac's in Petrograd, in Westminster Abbey, in London, and in hundreds of other Old World churches, I have fellowshipped with praying, worshipping multitudes.

Remember Days of Old.

Not only is prayer a universal instinct, but it is also an immemorial practice. No thoughtful person can fail to attach significance to these two tremendous facts. What exists everywhere, and has existed always, can not lightly be waved aside by careless critics. Something in the depths of human life has created the necessity for prayer. John, the Revelator, speaks of the prayers of the saints as incense rising before God.

If Christians needed any special warrant for the practice of prayer, they have it in the example and teachings of Jesus. To Him, prayer was more necesary than food. No matter how crowded His days, He took time to pray, often spending entire nights alone in the hills. His prayer life was His real life, climaxing in the agonizing prayer in Gethsemane and in the ejaculatory conversation with God when hanging on the cross.

So essential did Jesus deem prayer that He difinitely taught it to His disciples; and that instruction constitutes the present lesson, studied by millions of Sunday school members. At the same time He gave the model prayer: "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name, Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one." (R. V. Matt. 6:19-13.)

Points About Prayer.

There is an old jibe at a certain form of public prayer. One such was reported in a newspaper as "the most eloquent prayer ever addressed to a Boston audience." Shocking though the statement may sound, there are prayers which are directed more to the ears of the human listeners than to the heart of God. Jesus dealt with that sort of thing, which was common in His day. He excoriated the hypocrites who loved to pray in public places, for the eyes and ears of men. Real religion is never a matter of display.

By the instructions of the Great Teacher, a disciple's prayer life should be a secret matter between him and God. Praying is to be done in seclusion. Shut apart with the Father, and with no other eye to see, no other ear to hear, the prayer of communion and adoration and of supplication should be offered in simplicity and in sincerity. It is not a matter of much speaking; that, said the Master, is heathenish.

One point about prayer Jesus stressed: "Pray to thy Father who is in secret, and thy Father who seeth in secret shall recompense thee." Confidential, intimate and hidden are the relations between the seeking soul and the Giver of good gifts.

Prayer is more than petition: it is worship and fellowship. The Christian should be on as close terms with God as a good son is with his earthly parent. The big, new idea about prayer which Jesus introduced into a praying world is that God is our Father, and to be so addressed and regarded. If we can learn to say truly, "Our Father," all else that is implied in this tremendous truth will follow.

Ritchie Speaks At 3 Meetings In Montgomery

Rockville, Bethesda, Takoma Park Hear Appeals for Democrats.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and other members of the State Democratic ticket yesterday and last night addressed rallies in Rockville, Bethesda and Takoma Park in the interest of the State and local tickets. The speakers were introduced by Stedman Prescott, county Democratic chairman and candidate for State senator.

Gov. Ritchie cited the record of his administration and urged the voters of the county to return "experienced men" to office to handle "the enormous problems" which will face the administration which takes office in January. He also urged election of Democrats who would be in sympathy both with him and the National Administration in the counties and cities.

The Governor denied a published statement that employes of the motor vehicles commissioner's office had been given a raise and then asked to donate to the campaign fund. No State office can receive a raise in pay without the authority of the Governor and the board of public works, he said, and neither had approved any such action. All State workers will receive returns of their salary cuts at one time and no single office will be favored, he declared.

Donations Given Willingly.

"If anything has been done toward soliciting campaign funds from any State employes which are not given freely, cheerfully and with the good will and desire of the employes, then I have no knowledge of it. This is the only basis on which such contributions should be accepted. I do not want them on any other basis," the Governor declared.

Gov. Ritchie lauded the administration of Montgomery County, especially in its handling of relief problems. He declared the county was one of the foremost of the country.

"I'm going to be sitting in the executive mansion and I want some one I can trust to help me and advise me," he said. "I know of no one I would rather have than Stedman Prescott and these others of your county ticket."

The Governor criticized the speeches of his Republican opponent, Harry Nice, declaring that Nice was making all of his speeches on "little things," while the great things that had to be solved were not being discussed.

Offers No Panacea.

In declaring that he and his associates were going to "give everything that honest men could give" toward solving the relief problem, the Governor said: "We don't claim any panacea. We are not magicians and can't pull rabbits out of our sleeves."

The Governor's talk was received with applause by approximately 1,500 persons at the three places.

Herbert R. O'Conor, candidate for attorney general of Maryland, declared that Maryland has an overwhelming Democratic sentiment and that it has been demonstrated the affairs of the State are better administered under Democratic auspices than through any other political agency.

"A resume of the accomplishments of representatives of the Democratic party in Maryland is such as to command the confidence of the citizenry," he said.

He pointed out that Maryland stands in the forefront among commonwealths in its financial position and in its administration of criminal justice. He asserted that Baltimore is practically free of gangsters and this aids in preserving the entire State from their depredations. He cited the achievements of the National Administration and urged that the Democratic slate be elected as an aid to the National party.

"It is a foregone conclusion that our party's future is assured if it stands unswervingly behind the greatest living exponent of democracy, Franklin Delano Roosevelt," he declared.

Radcliffe Speaks.

George L. Radcliffe, candidate for United States Senator, declared that only through the close cooperation of Gov. Ritchie and his associates has it been possible for Public Works Administration policies to be so well managed in the State.

He declared that although President Roosevelt has brought the country a long way toward prosperity, it still has a long path to follow.

"If you bring in a new administration you can't get cooperation, for no matter how zealous they are or how much they want to help, they are of a different party," he said. "It is essential to have a Democratic organization in every county and village government to aid in carrying out the policies of the President and the Governor."

Williams S. Gordy, jr., State comptroller, and James A. Young, clerk of the Maryland Court of Appeals, were the other candidates who spoke. The entire 22 Democratic county candidates also took part in the three meetings.

The meeting in the Rockville High School in the afternoon was inaugurated with pageantry by the three military units of the county, the Service company of Silver Spring and the Howitzer company of Kensington, Maryland National Guard, and the Rockville unit of the Marine Reserves. The salute for the Governor was fired by the Howitzer company.

Grand Jurors Indict Roberts For 3 Killings

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Three true bills, charging Policeman George D. Roberts with murder, were returned yesterday by a special grand jury in the Alexandria Corporation Court, Judge William P. Woolls, presiding, after hearing four witnesses, and consuming an hour and 20 minutes. The witnesses were Mrs. Ella Stuart, wife of Ward Stuart, another victim; Police Capt. John A. Arnold and Dr. Llewellyn Powell, city coroner.

The jury was composed of Arthur H. Bryant, foreman; Edmund F. Ticer, Robert E. Knight, Joseph Hayman, George E. Garrett, William A. Moore and David N. Hulfish.

Roberts will be arraigned before Judge Woolls some time next week, according to Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan, as soon as Roberts' attorney, Charles Henry Smith, who is recovering from a minor operation, is able to appear in court. It is understood Mr. Bryan will ask for an early trial of the charges. Mr. Bryan has not yet definitely decided which of the three murder indictments will be tried first.

The Alexandria police have in their possession a steel crowbar, 5 feet long, slightly blood-stained, which they believe was the instrument used in the slaying of William H. Woodfield, aged night watchman at the coal yard of William A. Smoot & Co., early Thursday morning.

Detective Sergt. Edgar Sims has advanced the theory that a small instrument, possibly a hammer which was found near the scene, was first used to strike Woodfield when he perhaps surprised a man stealing coal; that Woodfield grappled with his assailant, and the latter then got possession of the crowbar and dealt a blow which crushed the watchman's skull, causing his death.

Funeral services for Mr. Woodfield will be conducted at the First Baptist Church at 2 p. m. today by the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor, and interment will be in the Methodist Protestant Cemetery.

The Very Rev. Kirk B. O'Ferrall, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, Mich., will preach in Christ Episcopal Church, Alexandria, at the 11 o'clock service, Sunday morning, and in St. Paul's at 8 o'clock Sunday evening.

The Rev. Dr. O'Ferrall and the Rev. Floyd Rogers, of Asheville, N. C., conducted the bishop's crusade in Christ and St. Paul's Churches here in 1927, and the congregations of those churches recall with pleasure their visit. Dr. O'Ferrall comes to Alexandria from the general convention now in session in Atlantic City.

The city council last night adopted a resolution providing for a temporary loan of $15,000, to take care of the first estimate due Doyle & Russell, contractors for the new Alexandria High School building, work on which is now in progress.

The brickwork on this building has been held up by the State PWA authorities, on recommendation of State School Architect Raymond V. Long, who objeced to the use of red brick instead of buff. The council has taken this matter up with the PWA officials in Washington, and it is understood work will shortly be resumed.

The council also adopted a resolution providing for a public hearing November 6 on a proposed change in the zoning ordinance. This would create what would be known as a "light commercial zone," permitting the uses now provided in Zones A, B and C, residential, and also office buildings and banks. All the area fronting on Washington street, now designated as D, commercial, would be included in the light commercial zone.

The first padlock order ever entered in an Alexandria court was given by Judge William P. Woolls, in the Corporation Court, against Charles Zell, Raymond Zell and Nellie Zell, under the provisions of the State ABC act, following a plea of guilty to the charge of maintaining a common nuisance at 1023 Princess street.

The order provided that the closing of the premises should not become effective if, within five days of the entry, Nellie Zell, owner of the premises, gave bond in the penalty of $500, with Raymond Zell as security. Bond was posted as required, immediately after the order was entered, so it was not necessary to padlock the place.

Alva Aerie, No. 871, Fraternal Order of Eagles, of Alexandria, will celebrate its thirtieth anniversary with a banquet at 8 o'clock tonight, at 1006 King street, with Edward J. Ryan, of Philadelphia, as the guest speaker. Dr. Thomas L. Miller, worthy president of Alva Aerie, will act as toastmaster, and all Eagles in good standing have been invited to attend.

The drill team of Potomac Lodge, No. 38, Odd Fellows, of Alexandria, will go to Winchester October 29, and confer the second degree of the order for Madison Lodge, No. 6. A meeting of Potomac Lodge was held last night, when the first degree was conferred on a class for Arlington, Accotink and Falls Church lodges.

A large delegation of members of the various councils in Alexandria of the Daughters of America will leave in buses at 4:30 o'colck this afternoon, from Odd Fellows Hall, to attend a district meeting at Ashburn, Loudoun County, at 8 o'clock tonight.

Frank P. O'Hanlon, 56 years old, employed as a steamfitter, and living at 1301 Duke street, died Thursday night at the Alexandria Hospital. He was a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., and is survived by his widow and one son.

Funeral services will be conducted at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon from the residence, and interment will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Funeral services for Miss Pauline Garland, 23, daughter of Mrs. Matilda G. Minter, of 124 North Fayette street, Alexandria, who died Thursday in a Washington hospital, will be held at 11 o'colck this morning at the Cunningham funeral home, where the body is now resting. Interment will be in Charlottesville.

Funeral services for Miss Alice J. Burleigh, who died Wednesday, were held yesterday from St. Mary's Catholic Church, Alexandria, the Rev. M. J. Hartigan, assistant pastor, officiating. Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Pallbearers were Walter S. Smith, John P. McDermott, Joseph C. McDermott, Edward Patterson, Andrew Schwarzmann and Fred L. Holt.

Smith revealed that he and Miss Cochran are taking no chances on getting lost in the jungles. He said they are carrying a kite.

"You could be buried in the jungle for weeks," he said, "while dozens of airplanes passed overhead without seeing you, so we are making sure that in case of any forced landings he will be found."

Counting pilots and copilots, radio operators and passengers, there will be 41 persons in the race. Only two, Lieut. G. Shaw and C. J. Melrose, will fly solo. The big plane to be flown by K. D. Parmentier will carry three passengers, Thea Rasche, P. M. Gillizzen and R. J. Dominie, the latter from Brazil, besides the crew of four.

New Virginia Roads Receive Approval

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—The Federal Government, through its Bureau of Public Roads, today gave the starting word to another major program of highway work in Virginia.

Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley said he had received notification that 99 of 101 projects proposed by his department for the next fiscal year had been approved. Previously the Federal Bureau had given its approval to 32 per cent of the projects outlined for the coming year toward which a Federal appropriation of $3,700,000 has been made.

"First Things First."

On no public issue has the attitude of President Roosevelt been more consistent than in his dealings with those who served in the World War. His address at the dedication of a veterans' hospital in Roanoke emphasizes this. Clearly and unequivocally the President points out that the Government has been generous to veterans as a group, and that other demands upon the Treasury are now of far greater social and National importance.

No direct reference was made in the speech to the highly-organized campaign for immediate payment of the bonus, which does not become due until 1945. But the President's statement that in spending money "to eliminate the causes of depression and the drags on prosperity * * * we must have due regard for the good credit of the Government * * *" should be sufficient evidence that he has not changed his mind on this issue. Groups within the American Legion who are ready to revive the ill-judged bonus campaign at their convention in Miami next week will find no encouragement whatever in the President's address.

In fact, the single purpose of this speech seems to have been to point out that exceptional benefits to one group are paid at the expense, and to the detriment, of others. Veterans have been given many privileges, as the President said, by both the Federal and State governments. Since they are in the prime of life, the great majority who are in no way disabled are better able to care for themselves than many of the casualties of the depression.

The Administration's economy act, designed to eliminate doles to veterans who suffered no injury during the war, was emasculated during the last session of Congress. Failure of this constructive move to restore pensions to a reasonable basis has been a serious handicap to sound fiscal policy. While there seems to be little hope of regaining this loss, the Administration makes clear that all the safeguards have not been abandoned. The position taken at Roanoke should now be confirmed in other directions, where it is equally important to have "due regard for the good credit of the Government."

An Admirable Candidate.

The campaign which Robert Moses is waging for Governor of New York is refreshingly realistic. And it is arousing an obvious popular admiration which should be suggestive to other political candidates, particularly to other Republicans who are floundering in the doubtful seas of expediency.

Whatever his fate in November—and his prospects for victory are none too bright—Mr. Moses has already demonstrated how to be effective. Indeed he is more than effective. He is a positive embarrassment to his political opponents not only because he knows them thoroughly, and knows their hypocrisies, but also because he dares to speak his mind boldly and bluntly on the basis of political principles.

Mr. Moses happens to be one of those men who are interested in good government and negligent of narrow partisanship. Thus he was a right-hand man and Secretary of State for Alfred E. Smith. In his long crusading for park development, as a Moreland commissioner investigating the State Banking Department in 1929, and in his other public services, he has made a politician-proof record.

Unembarrassed by political associations himself, Mr. Moses is now adding light and liveliness to the political scene by puncturing the armor of gentlemen who are not so unencumbered—and who shrink from confessing the loyalty to the spoils system so candidly avowed by Mr. Farley.

Back Tax Collections.

During the first eight months of the year the Treasury has succeeded in collecting $117,000,000 of past-due income taxes, an amount nearly equal to the total delinquencies paid up during the entire year 1933.

Obviously, large back-tax collections are not a cause for unmixed congratulation. They indicate either past negligence on the part of collecting agencies or a tendency to deal gently with delinquents. Certainly, that has been the case in many States and municipalities which have felt unable to proceed as vigorously in this matter as the dictates of sound financing require. Fortunately, the lax methods that characterized the early depression years are no longer as readily excusable on the grounds of inability of debtors to pay.

It is essential in the interest of efficient administration, and in fairness to individuals who discharge their obligations promptly, that those who owe Federal income taxes be forced to pay. It is equally in the interest of efficient administration that such collections, often representing great sacrifices by taxpayers, should not be squandered in light-hearted and inefficient outlays which make the deprivation seem vain.

Against The Wall.

The gold bloc countries are fighting under great and growing odds to preserve the gold standard in face of the deflationary pressure exerted by the depreciated currencies of the rest of the world. The latest blow dealt to this continental group comes from the Far East, where China is taking action to bring down the value of her currency and Japan is countering by encouraging a further drop in the already heavily depreciated yen. Our silver-buying policy is of course responsible for this development.

The position of the gold bloc was already sufficiently critical without the addition of fresh causes of anxiety. The United States and Great Britain have reduced the gold value of their currencies approximately 40 per cent, while the subsequent rise in domestic price levels has been limited. As a result both countries have succeeded in reducing the gold level of their export prices by about one-third.

Consequently, France and the other gold bloc countries, which have not altered the value of their currencies during this period, have been compelled to cut domestic production costs severely in order to compete in foreign markets. Despite such efforts deflation has not been great enough to offset the artificial advantages enjoyed by countries with depreciated currencies. Living costs, too, remain high in the gold bloc countries, with the result that attempts to reduce wages have met with strong opposition and have led to serious political disorders.

For these reasons delegates to the conference called yesterday in Brussels, following a preliminary session at Geneva, are trying to increase trade among members of the gold bloc as a means of relieving the growing strain. Special trade agreements will be difficult to effect, however, without doing violence to most-favored nation clauses of existing treaties. Furthermore, there is considerable skepticism as to the willingness of France to relax quota restrictions in favor of the weaker members of the gold bloc.

There is also the danger that defensive and discriminatory action by the gold bloc might lead to retaliatory measures. If British trade should suffer, for example, as a result of preferential continental agreements, further declines in sterling might follow, offsetting any gains to the gold bloc.

In short, it is doubtful whether any emergency method of salvation can be relied upon to relieve the relentless and unfair pressure of fluctuating and heavily depreciated exchanges upon the domestic business of countries with stable gold currencies. The one sure remedy lies in a return to exchange stability by international agreement. Devaluation of the gold bloc currencies would only aggravate conditions which have already resulted in severe trade dislocations and world-wide protraction if not increase of unemployment.

Bottlenecks.

Widening of F street between Seventh and Ninth streets, for which the PWA has allotted $100,000, will be one of the most important recent improvements in Washington's business section. It is, indeed, astonishing that such an impediment to traffic has been tolerated so long by officials having authority to remove it. The PWA deserves a vote of thanks for cutting the Gordian knot.

That the PWA should undertake this work is entirely appropriate, for the most costly part of the project involves remodeling of the south entrance to the Patent Office Building. Efforts of the District Commissioners to bring about this improvement have been repeatedly thwarted because it necessitates changes in this Federal structure.

Secretary Ickes' interest in this traffic problem might well be emulated by other Federal officials who indirectly create acute traffic problems by thoughtless planning of Government buildings. Enormous expenditures to eliminate traffic "bottlenecks" will some day be necessary if huge buildings are erected with no more anticipation in this respect than entered into the planning of the Triangle south of Pennsylvania avenue.

Quack Suffrage Schemes.

An amusing plan for quick realization of suffrage for residents of the District has been presented to the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights. The committee making the report would simply have the District retroceded to Maryland by act of Congress. Suggestions of this sort can not, of course, be taken seriously. The report is worthy of note only because it reveals the naive approach of some groups to the deep-seated issue of suffrage in Washington.

In the first place, such a retrocession would be unconstitutional. The District was not created by Congress, but by the fundamental law. Legal experts in the Department of Justice are of the opinion that even the retrocession of Arlington County to Virginia was unconstitutional. That one-time section of the District never did serve as an integral part of the National Capital. Its transfer was effected without disturbing the seat of Federal Government. Talk of placing under State control the area in which the principal institutions of Federal Government have been established is simply absurd.

Whatever solution may evolve from the suffrage dilemma in Washington, this city must remain under the ultimate control of Congress. Otherwise the independence of the Federal Government from State domination would be compromised. Indeed, the only purpose of the District is to serve as a seat of National Government. To destroy its special function for the sake of securing suffrage would be like killing a patient to save him the distress of an irritated finger.

Half-baked schemes which ignore the unique character of the District serve only to discredit the whole cause of suffrage here. If citizen groups are really interested in obtaining representative institutions for Washington, they would be well advised to keep their discussions on a practical and thoughtful plane.

"Unauthorized But Useful."

The record of the New Deal is replete with evidence of a debonair attitude toward the fundamental principles of good government. But off-hand it is difficult to recall an instance more casual than the position taken by Secretary Ickes in the Beltsville muddle.

A week ago it was learned that Mr. Ickes had halted work on several of the uncompleted buildings at that nearby agricultural research center. It developed that while a PWA allocation of over $1,300,000 had been spent, the work is not yet finished. The upshot is that some one with rare discrimination has transferred an official in charge to a bird sanctuary. And $450,000 more has been authorized by the PWA so that the construction at Beltsville may go forward.

Since the original allotment of PWA funds for construction of this huge experiment station has been exhausted, and the buildings will be useless until they are finished, provision of more money is not necessarily throwing good after bad. But taxpayers are entitled to expect a somewhat more concerned attitude on the part of Administrator Ickes. "Perhaps an excess of zeal was displayed in the Beltsville project," he observes, "but there has never been the least suspicion of graft or malappropriation of funds."

"Excess of zeal" is a seductive phrase. It could, for instance, be applied by the defense to the man who hit his wife over the head with a crowbar when a hammer would have served as well. But passing over the meaning of excess zeal which involves authorization of an additional $450,000, we come to this less whimsical observation by Mr. Ickles:

> I believe that some construction projects were carried through that were not authorized, but all of the unauthorized items will be useful.

If the expenditure of taxpayers' money for unauthorized projects is not sufficient cause for the investigation at which Mr. Ickes scoffs, it may well be asked: How grave must a blunder be to call forth an inquiry by the Public Works Administrator? If it is no offense to spend PWA funds for work that has never received official sanction, it would seem that investigation is in order for the entire Public Works Administration, rather than just Beltsville.

Dress Suits And Tweeds.

Sean O'Casey has found out that human curiosity is something to contend with. Like most Irishmen, he has courage in so great a measure that he would brave even a Washington banquet garbed in rough tweeds and a jersey. Words, heated words, he says, have been written about his idiosyncrasy and now he feels it is time for him to come to his own sartorial defense.

In the American Spectator, that Nathan-Cabell-O'Neill handbill, he takes a page and a quarter to explain that his dress is not so much an idiosyncrasy as a symbol. With asperity the playwright denies that it is snobbery which makes him dislike the full dress suit or even the black tie. Someone once wrote that he "still refused to dress like a waiter." That riled him into writing his piece, because so "sickeningly snobbish" an implication of contempt—both for evening dress and for waiters—was alien to the real reasons.

In the first place, says the Irishman, there is no longer any distinction to evening dress. "His Majesty the King, when he wears it, is indistinguishable from his humblest subject who may be wearing it too." In O'Casey's opinion the full dress suit is the most democratic dress worn by man today. "Much more so than the dress worn by the proletarian soldier or sailor or policeman, and, certainly, much more democratic than the simple black shirt worn by the born-in-patriotism and conceived-in-wisdom members of the Fascist order."

O'Casey's abstention from boiled shirts and their trappings is not due to a proletarian hate for what the masters wear. Nor is it, he says, cheap sensationalism. He even admires (rather wistfully, we assume, having seen him in his tweeds) the man who can dress decently and be pleasantly inconspicuous. He wears his tweeds and jersey because he is so hard on clothes that he can look decent in nothing else!

His objection to tails is also aesthetic. They lack color. They lack individuality. And so the brownish-red tweeds, the striking jersey of Sean O'Casey. He has the courage to hide his frail form in heavy drapes instead of going out o' evenings in a garb that would, we suspect, cause him to scare dowagers and frighten debutantes. There are many men who might profit by Mr. O'Casey's good Irish sense.

Hoover has written a book on liberty. Many are exercising their liberty by not reading the book.

Don't worry too much about being in a rut. Many get out of a rut and slide into the ditch.

A Challenge to Business.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a striking show of inconsistency in the attitude of business toward Government intervention and the application of personal initiative so absolutely necessary to substantial recovery. In one breath business insists that the Government get out of business and stay out, and at the same time our President is insisting, and has been all along, that business men set to work to save their own handiwork from the necessity of further Government participation.

If big business in this country means anything by its persistent advice to the Government to withhold any further interference with what they consider their private and personal affairs, then let them get into this recovery project with the same vigor with which they deliver themselves against the Government action. They must eventually get into this movement with all the vigor of rejuvenated youngsters and disregard everything except reestablishing themselves on a wholesome platform. The Government can't do it, and the President has repeatedly told them it is not possible for him to do it, and has insisted that they patriotically attempt to save themselves.

They should cease their criticism of the Government's action in the premises until they have at least made a movement in keeping with the persistent persuasion of the President that they take hold of the pump handle and show a disposition to use their strength as well as their business acumen in an effort to salvage this wreckage and get the Government out of the management of industry. If they are afraid to attempt to bring their own business out of this crash they should be thankful for any assistance offered by the Government or any other agency.

If they will take the time, and they must sooner or later, to consider the great working public as an essential necessity to their progress and success, and have the workers fighting their battles for them rather than fighting them personally we will begin to show some signs of recovery which will be worth the name. Rope and Chair.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As I begin this letter my mind flashes back to Chicago and its wave of unrestricted crime that flared up immediately following the World War, which scientists, medical, surgical, mental and philosophical, blamed for the disorder.

Then with a disgusted kick I boost my memory across country, following the old Texas trail through the little towns of Abilene, Hays City, Medicine Lodge, Dodge City, Kans., to Billings, Mont., and in every town stop to review its "Boot Hill" that stands as witness to the fidelity of "Wild Bill," Bat Masterson and other old-time Western peace officers who wore their badge as an emblem of Christian decency and their guns as legal instruments for the prevention of crime.

Then, reluctantly I assure you, I drag my memory back to the present day with all of its cheap, meaningless, big-word philosophies advocating pity and consideration for those who laughingly machine gun babies playing on the streets, grab our citizens and hold them for ransom, and loot our banks of the hard-earned dollars deposited in them by needy people.

And at that I wonder where it is all going to end. The United States of America is the only country where crime and criminals wax fruitful and are glorified by cheap, corn-fodder papers besmeared with gory concoctions of fiction not worthy the mental abilities of a 12-year-old patient in a psychopathic hospital.

Every time one looks in on a newsstand the first thing one's eyes rest on is the disgustingly near-nude figure of a creature miscalled woman, or a gaudily bedecked figure representing an Eastern artist's conception of a cowboy banging his way out of a mob of other gun-dummies.

Disorderly conditions are bound to exist until this Government awakes and employes revolutionary methods to prevent crime, which namely are: Eliminate the criminals by the rope and chair route, and burn their glorifying propaganda.

Thank You!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a reader of The Post for nearly 42 years, I wish to congratulate the present staff for the splendid improvements made in all departments of this reliable old paper.

Being a Government employe, I particularly enjoy the Federal Diary conducted by Mr. Baker. It is reliable, free from attacks upon those who supervise and direct Federal activities, and is conducted in a clean, dignified manner that reflects credit upon The Post and Mr. Baker.

The absence of harrowing details of crime reports in the columns of your paper is another feature that commends it as a clean and wholesome newspaper.

I wish Mr. Eugene Meyer many years of success in his efforts to make The Post the best newspaper in the United States.

Insurance "Impressions."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an insurance agent, I have read with mixed feelings both the Post Impressionist's reflections on the mysterious phraseology of insurance agents' letters and the reflections on those reflections indulged in by your correspondent, N. H. The latter sufferer should familiarize himself—or herself—with Army correspondence, if mystery is the element desired. Many times, in my military experience, during the World War, I wrote higher headquarters for their interpretation of certain paragraphs of Army regulations, only to receive replies directing my attention to the very paragraphs on which I had requested enlightenment. Politics and Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On page seven of your paper dated October 15 I saw an article to the effect that the Democratic party is asking through National Chairman James A. Farley for funds from the Federal Government workers. Never in my lifetime have I ever known any other political party to ask men and women to contribute to a campaign fund, especially Federal Government workers, who are in the Civil Service, where politics is supposed to be banned.

There are the Federal relief funds that this same James A. Farley has spoken of in different States throughout this Union, saying that if the voters appreciated this help, surely they would vote the Democratic ticket in return for this help. It seems that Mr. Farley has lost to sight that there are other citizens who pay taxes as well as Democrats, and are entitled to help even though they do not vote the Democratic ticket.

Farmer Offers Substitute for AAA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Perhaps nothing is more natural than the muddle made by economic theorists, also editors (I refer to your editorial of October 12), when they attempt to expound what they call the farm problem, which is no problem at all, and nothing is more remarkable than the avidity with which those theories are swallowed, not only by the general public, but often by the farmers themselves, who ought to know better.

I sometimes think that the Secretary of Agriculture, and all his assistants, should be selected from right between the plow-handles, dressed in overalls, with a red bandanna instead of a collar. They might not know the high intricacies of economics, but they would know the facts affecting agriculture, and the results thereof.

Apparently the farm relief program of the Administration is proceeding exclusively upon the untenable theory, more or less prevalent for some years past, that the sole cause of agricultural depression is overproduction, which theory is based upon a fundamental lack of discrimination. Farmers do not produce much of nonessentials, such as comforts, conveniences, luxuries, the market for which is subject to varying whim, or the existing state of general prosperity. They produce necessities almost exclusively, and there is no such thing possible as overproduction of necessities.

The real trouble with the farmer is threefold: 1. The insensate local land and farm-equipment tax. 2. The unfortunate mortgage. 3. The annual commercial fertilizer bill.

All three of these obligations have to be met at stated times, and in unvarying amounts, irrespective of the amount of production, favorableness of season, or destruction by the elements. But the farmer's only reserve is his labor. Now, the buyer is no fool. He knows that the farmer must sell within a certain period to meet fixed expenses, and consequently, the buyer fixes the price. Place any other industry under like circumstances, so that its products have to be sold at a certain time, and at the buyer's price, and see how long it will last.

The remedy is simple. All reforms, as well as abuses, go back, in the last analysis, to the ballot. Therefore, (1) elect State legislatures which will abolish the farm land tax in toto. This can easily be compensated for by other taxation based on common sense. (2) Let the billions expended by the Federal Government for farm relief focus exclusively on the mortgage. (3) The farmer himself must learn somehow to eschew chemical fertilizer (except in rare and special cases), as his worst enemy.

Conversely to this view, the present cure-all program for agricultural ills, briefly stated, is manipulation and control of the economic laws governing the situation. Just the other day I read this astounding statement, quoting a prominent Administration official: "The present program will continue the policy of controlling supply and demand," a thing which this Administration, or any other human agency, can no more do than it can control gravitation or direct the winds.

The relief, then, that the farmer needs, in order to be independent, is relief from the necessity of having to meet certain and unvarying obligations out of an income uncertain and varying both as to time and amount. When this is done, if ever, the farmer can hold his products until prices are favorable, and farm prices will adjust themselves, as all prices eventually do, without the aid of government.

The plight of the farmer may be temporarily palliated by donations of public money under the guise of payment for crop and stock reduction, but such payments can not continue indefinitely, and the permanence of that plight will not be removed until the cause is removed.

The Post Impressionist

Films For The Family

Postoffice, Saturday.

"YOU must help these women clean up your movies!"

That sounds as if the speaker were an enemy—with or without reason—of the motion-picture industry, doesn't it?

"The situation is one of cooperation or coercion!"

Doesn't that sound as if were uttered only the other day?

Yet—though he has been saying these things ever since—the speaker first said them four years ago.

And he is the owner of a chain of motion-picture theaters.

And, before there came any popular protest about screen morals, he made the morally unobjectionable picture pay.

Fred Wehrenberg is a member of the Association of Motion-Picture Theater Owners of America. At each of its yearly national conventions since 1930, he has argued for its cooperation with such bodies as, for instance, the National Previewing Groups—duly delegated representatives of the D. A. R., the National Council of Jewish Women and the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who, before new films are released, study and report on them.

Anyhow, Wehrenberg practiced what he preached. And he succeeded.

St. Louis was the first large American city to have a Better Films Council—an organization of parents and teachers and whatnot to—well, to effect just what its name implies. Many of the local theater owners hindered it, or were at least indifferent to it. But, from its inception, Wehrenberg, owning four important St. Louis theaters, declared:

"These people are right, and it's right for us to work with them. Secondarily, they are going to be influential pretty soon, and it is poor showmanship not to work with them.

"I'm going to."

The Council proposed to attend all first runs and then broadcast its findings. The recalcitrant owners were loath to assent, but Wehrenberg gave the idea right of way. It is to be assumed that he even provided the Council's scouts with opportunities to see pictures in advance of the public—shared his own local previews with them.

Anyhow, he took counsel with the Council. He followed its advice. And especially he specialized in "family night pictures." He was among the adventurous pioneers to advertise:

FAMILY NIGHT

EVERY FRIDAY

"The management will try to select pictures suitable for the entire family."

The other theater owners saw the light, but they saw it later than Wehrenberg. They backed the plan, but not before Wehrenberg had the lead with the public. For it turned out that the public had long wanted just what the Council gave them—and this was originally provided through the Wehrenberg theaters.

The St. Louis plan works this way, according to Boxoffice:

"Each week, groups of selected reviewers catch all the first run shows of the city. Pictures are judged strictly on their merits as entertainment and are classified"—as being suitable for all the family, for adults only, or for what the Council describes as "young adults."

"But," say you, "aren't there some pictures which don't—er—which don't fall into any of these categories?"

Yes, indeed, there have been—a few.

"On occasions," Boxoffice explains, "the reviewers decide that a picture is unfit."

We take it that Boxoffice means unfit for you, adult reader, or for your adult Post-Impressionist.

"And," you ask, "what then?"

Why, then, Boxoffice assures us, "a protest is sent to the Hays organization, the producers and the stars that appear in the picture."

Whereupon—we hope—New York makes trouble for Hollywood.

That is the St. Louis plan.

It is gaining ground in many cities. In St. Louis it is now solidly established, thanks to Mr. Wehrenberg.

And the St. Louis picture-loving public hasn't forgotten what it owes to his decent sense of business and his businesslike sense of decency.

Good Morning, Teacher!

WHEN Dr. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, comes down to join the New Deal, this, I imagine, is about the way his conference with Mr. Roosevelt will run:

BARGERON

Mr. Hutchins, being ushered into the President's office by Marvin McIntyre: "Good morning, Mr. President. I'm very glad to see you."

Mr. Roosevelt: "Oh, hello doctor, come in and sit down. I'm glad you got here."

Dr. Hutchins, somewhat ruefully: "I had begun to think, Mr. President, that you were not going to call on me."

Mr. Roosevelt: "Now, I don't want you to feel that way at all, doctor. Perhaps I was saving the best until the last."

Dr. Hutchins grins; Mr. Roosevelt grins.

* * * *

Mr. Roosevelt: "Have you got fixed up for a place to live yet? I suppose, of course, you will stay at some of the fraternity houses. There are plenty of the boys here, from Amherst, Columbia, North Carolina, from all around, doctor. A lot of them are batching it. I don't think you will have any trouble at all."

Dr. Hutchins: "I left my suit case in the check room at the Union Station until I decide where to go. I've been thinking it would be nice to get out with some of the rest of the boys."

Mr. Roosevelt: "Well, look around, take your time. Spend the next several days getting located and find your way around. I want you to get to all of the places, the NRA, the AAA, the RFC, the FERA, the HOLC. If you wan't me to, I'll send somebody with you, but Washington is not a big town. A fellow from Chicago should have no trouble finding his way around."

Dr. Hutchins: "I should like to get down to work as soon as possible, Mr. President."

Mr. Roosevelt: "Oh, don't hurry. There's plenty of time. Get around, get your hand in. We've got a lot of interesting things here."

Dr. Hutchins, timidly: "Well, er, er, do I go on the pay roll right away?"

Mr. Roosevelt: "Oh, of course! You will be paid out of the public works funds. Well, I have a very busy day ahead. You run along, look things over and come back to see me—let's see, in about a week."

Dr. Hutchins, uncertainly: "Can [illegible] give me some idea as to what I am to do?"

Mr. Roosevelt, becoming impatient: "Oh, there is plenty to do. Don't worry about that. Better give things the once over first."

* * * *

Dr. Hutchins, becoming more uneasy: "But Mr. President. I left my school. There was some question in my mind as to whether I should come. I'd appreciate at least a line on what you have in mind for me."

Mr. Roosevelt, realizing that he has a case on his hands, settles back in his chair and wrinkles his forehead: "I want you to be a coordinator, doctor—that's it. I want you to coordinate."

Dr. Hutchins: "To coordinate what, Mr. President?"

Mr. Roosevelt: "Why, coordinate, doctor, just coordinate. Being a university president, you certainly know what 'coordinate' means. What is Coordinator Richberg doing?"

Dr. Hutchins: "Why, he is making speeches."

Mr. Roosevelt: "That's it, doctor. That's what I want you to do. Doctor, this country needs more and better New Deal speechmakers. Never before was there such a great need for men who know how to handle words. It's a rare opportunity for constructive service, doctor. Now you go ahead and drop around to the various agencies and get pamphlets on what they are doing. And be sure to drop in at the Democratic National committee.

World's Coffee Supply Drops 983,005 Bags

New York, Oct. 19.—The world's visible supply of coffee, including the restricted stocks in Brazil, amounted to 21,827,967 bags on October 1, a drop of 983,005 bags, or 4.3 per cent from the September 1 total, 22,810,972 bags. This is the smallest October 1 figure since October, 1929, and compares with 23,598,070 last year, and 34,492,586 on October 1, 1931.

The decreasing supplies are solely due to Brazil's program of destruction, which has, since June, 1931, been responsible for the elimination of in excess of 32,000,000 bags, or over 4,000,000,000 pounds.

Japan's Railway Deal Perplexes the Orient

Some Observers See Ulterior Motives and Say That Tokyo Really Does Not Wish to Control Chinese Eastern.

It is now over three years since Japan inaugurated the military conquest of Manchuria, from which has developed the still unrecognized nation of Manchukuo. To obtain an objective account of the stability of this new state The Post arranged with Mr. David Wills to furnish a series of three articles, written after careful study on the scene. The second of these articles appears below. The third will appear in the Special Articles Section of The Sunday Post.

By David Wills

Dairen, Oct. 2 (By mail)—The position taken by Japan with regard to the purchase of the Chinese Eastern Railway interest from Russia is not easy to reconcile with the theory that Manchukuo was established to secure peace in the Far East.

It was one of the main complaints of the Japanese against the old Chinese regime that the Chinese were building railways to compete with and destroy the value of the Japanese-owned South Manchurian Railway. Exactly the same tactics are now being applied to the Chinese Eastern. With the opening of the new port of Rashin still more of the traffic which used to go over the Chinese Eastern will be diverted to the Manchukuo State Railways.

Yet even under these conditions the Russian interest, which has still 30 years to run, is well worth the price asked by the Soviet. And under Japanese operation, with the lower wages that the Japanese would pay, and the increased traffic that would result from the cessation of the present uncertainty, the railway might be worth a great deal more than the price on which tentative agreement has been reached. Besides the economic advantages of complete ownership, Japan-Manchukuo would benefit by the removal from Manchukuo of the present Soviet employes of the railway which would follow the sale by the Russians of their interests.

It has been suggested that Japan does not really want to purchase the railway, an attitude for which three reasons are given. In the first place, Tokyo might wish to delay settlement in order that the competitive effect of the new railways may be more pronounced, the value of the Chinese Eastern further depleted, and the railway purchased at a lower price, or even abandoned by the Russians. In the second place, certain interests may consider it cheaper to seize the line by force, rather than to pay for it. And in the third place, it may be desired to keep the matter open as a face-saving excuse in the event of further military expansion.

Delays Offset to Saving.

The first reason is the least likely, for the saving in price which might be obtained would be negligible compared with the cost of delays, and the Russians are not in the least likely to abandon the railway voluntarily. The second argument is more plausible, and excuse for the seizure could be found in the constant accusations against the Soviet of using the line as a means for promoting banditry and guerilla warfare against the Japan-Manchukuo regime. But there are two main reasons which make it difficult to believe that the banditry is due to Russian stimulation. The first is that Japan, through the Manchukuo forces, has the same military and police powers in the Chinese Eastern Railway zone as in the South Manchuria Railway zone, and there can be little doubt that if Japan wanted to, banditry could be suppressed in the former, at least, as well as in the latter. The second is the complete lack of motive to explain why Russia should stimulate banditry which can only destroy the economic value of its own property.

If the price agreed to by the Soviet is reasonable, of which there can be little doubt, and if the Japanese repudiate the suggestions that they are considering military seizure, there remains only one reason why the present tentative agreement should not be fulfilled. This is that the matter is being kept open in case of further military operations, directed against Russia. If Japan aims at expansion from Manchukuo southward into China proper, the purchase of the railway and the elimination of the Soviet employes from Manchukuo would obviously be to her advantage. But for operations against Russia, the situation is different.

Two Races Clash.

The Russian maritime province south of the Amur points south like a spear head; at the point of the spear and near the geographical heart of the Japan-Manchukuo Empire lies Vladivostok, controlled by a people whose political, economic and social ideas are exactly opposite to those of the Japanese rulers, who consider themselves the chief defense of the East against Communism. Japan might well consider it impossible to have permanently friendly relations with a country organized on so antagonistic a basis. Japan might well aim at the elimination of the Russians from Vladivostok as her only guarantee of peace. Excuse for the military action could be found in the alleged Soviet subversive actions in Manchukuo.

I find it extremely difficult to believe that the Russians are responsible for the banditries of which the Japanese accuse them. Russia has everything to lose by further warfare. The strongest argument that Russia could find for the further propagation of Communism would be the success of Communism in Russia as a means of building up a high standard of peaceful living.

The Russians are now aware of this and are not likely to jeopardize their chance of success internally by an external war. In the Far East they are arming themselves against a possible attack, and developing an eastern agricultural and industrial area both for its own merits and for the support of an army. But provided Japan does not attack either the maritime province, or Outer Mongolia, Russia will not look for war.

It is argued by some Japanese in Manchukuo that this armament of Russia is directed toward the acquisition of Dairen as a year-round port. Of all Manchukuo "stories" this is the least likely, for Vladivostok is perfectly adequate for Russian needs, and is kept open all the year round by the use of ice breakers in the winter.

There is great confusion of motive behind the Japanese actions in Manchuria, and it would be unfair to suggest a clear picture of virtue or of vice. The question as to who shall control Manchukuo has still to be fought out between the different Japanese interests. A fair and final settlement of the Chinese Eastern Railway controversy would be an indication that for the time being at least the more reasonable Japanese administrators had gained the day over the advocates of further conquest.

The Great Galosh Trial.

("The Soviet court solemnly tried a pair of galoshes, among other things, hearing accusations and defense in proceedings designed to expose manufacturers of shoddy products."—News item).

Prosecutor—Gentlemen of the jury, I ask you to look upon these galoshes! Look well upon them! Consider the testimony against them carefully. The question before you is are they or are they not good galoshes, the kind of galoshes that are found among honest citizens?

Defense Counsel—I object. A pair of galoshes are no better or no worse for being found among honest citizens. I once knew a horse thief who had the best pair of galoshes I ever saw.

Judge—Objection overruled!

* * * *

Prosecutor—This is a most important case. The Nation is suffering from a wave of inferior galoshes. Are you going to allow this wave to continue unchecked or are you going to find these galoshes guilty as charged? Let us get down to the facts. What are galoshes? They are, in fact, rubbers with high sleeves.

Defense Counsel—I object to counsel interpreting galoshes for the jury. Stalin versus $16.49 Raincoats, 1927.

Judge—I thnik the State may properly describe galoshes. Proceed!

Prosecutor—What are the facts in this case?

Judge—Galoshes and leaky rubbers are two different things.

* * * *

Prosecutor—The facts, to proceed, are these: The galoshes before this tribunal are of a type that can not be allowed to go unpunished. They must not be turned loose on a defenseless community.

Defense Counsel—This is all immaterial, irrelevant and prejudiced.

Judge—We will never get anywhere with those galoshes with these constant objections.

Prosecutor—We will never get anywhere in those galoshes, anyhow, unless we wear rubber boots over them.

Judge—Proceed!

* * * *

Prosecutor — Gentlemen of the jury, look at those galoshes! Examine those soles. Look at those heels!

Defense Counsel—I object to the prosecutor calling my clients heels! Department of Shipping versus 23-Cent Woolen Socks, 1928.

Judge—I think this case has gone far enough. Gentlemen of the jury, have you reached a verdict?

The Jury—We have.

Judge—What is it?

Foreman—Not guilty on the ground of mistaken identity.

Judge—The galoshes are discharged. Bring on the case of the State versus Birthday Neckties.

DR. MILBURN LINCOLN WILSON, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture. Behind the plowshare on an Iowa farm he built the foundation for an agricultural career that has advanced him from ordinary farmer to a recognized authority on wheat production and to his latest post, succeeding Rexford G. Tugwell. Following graduation from Iowa State College, he judged exhibits at corn shows and became, successively, county agricultural agent, farm management demonstrator of Montana extension service, agricultural economist, student abroad of world wheat trends, and adviser to the Soviet government in connection with experimental farming. Known as "M. L." to his friends, he is a Mason, a Unitarian and a Democrat. Hobbies: Lincolniana, Indian wars of Northern Great Plains and early agriculture.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 19 (Spl.).—Today was "school day" at the Hagerstown Fair, which will come to a close tomorrow with motorcycle races, and 10,000 children were on the ground.

Racing fans got a thrill in the second heat of the second race, when Edith Scott, owned by P. J. Reilley, of Westchester, Pa., and driven by Al Peacock, went down at the far turn and threw the driver. Peacock was shaken up, but the horse was not hurt and both horse and driver came back in the final heat.

The dog show, of which James Wolfe was superintendent, was a feature, with the entries being judged this afternoon. The Irish setter of Dr. Hubert N. Porterfield, of Hagerstown, was adjudged the best dog in the show.

The results of the horse show follow:

Wave of Price-Cutting In Gasoline Continues

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The wave of price-cutting in gasoline continued today with announcements of new reductions by several of the large refining and distributing companies.

Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey posted a reduction of ½ cent a gallon at Baltimore, making the new service station price 8½ cents a gallon, excluding 5 cents in taxes. The Jersey company's subsidiary, Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana, effective today, reduced gasoline prices ½ cent at Knoxville, Tenn., to 10 cents a gallon on regular grades, exclusive of taxes.

Maryland Jobless Protest Preference for Veterans.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 19 (Spl.).—The Western Maryland Unemployed League has sent a letter to the mayor and city council protesting the announced policy of giving veterans first preference in the employment of labor on the city's intercepting sewer project. The matter will come up at the council meeting Monday.

The letter from the jobless group, signed by H. J. Athey, chairman, said the system of giving veterans first preference was used in the work now under way on the McMullen highway.

"I feel that such practices are unfair to mankind," said Athey, "and contrary to your slogan used in the municipal campaign. Such practices are contrary to President Roosevelt's instructions, wherein he declared he did not want any one to place politics or the power of any secret societies above the needy and suffering in connection with relief work."

City officials said the provision under which veterans must be given preference is contained in the contract for the project and that the clause was inserted by the Public Works Administration, which gave the city a grant of $103,000 to aid in the work.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

"JAYHAWKER," the sterlingly accurate play by Sinclair Lewis and Lloyd Lewis of shenanigan politics during the Civil War, running now at the National, will appear in book form from Doubleday-Doran in the spring, most likely. They hope to do it up brown in the typographical style of the 1860's, with old-fashioned thumb-nail drawings. * * * Ruth Suckow is planning to live in town this winter. "The Folks" (Farrar & Rinehart) had 47,000 orders in advance of publication. * * * From Kay Boyle, in Austria, through the kindness of her aunt, Mrs. Nina Allender, who lives on Nineteenth street, comes announcement of one of the most interesting projects I've met in some time. Miss Boyle, and her husband, Laurence Vail, and Nina Conarian, are gathering original material for a book to be called "Short Stories, 1934." So far, that need be greeted with little more than a polite nod. But the point for enthusiasm is that each story is to go on one page of the book (300 words), that there will be consecutive dates like a diary at the tops of the pages and no story titles, and that each little yarn is to represent as closely as possible the spirit of the day. Thus, the book will form semi-history in cherrystone fiction. Note that this means contemporary moods rather than newspaper items. Miss Boyle says that January and February, 1934, are filled, but contributed material for the rest of the year (to be paid for, if used, by pro rata royalties) will be highly welcomed at the Kaiser Hotel, Kitzbuhel, Tirol, Austria. So far, Evelyn Scott, William March, James Farrell, and Arthur Calder-Marshall are among those appearing in the volume.

Post-haste, special delivery from E. S. McCawley, president of the American Booksellers Association, comes the list of 200 books which said association is to present to the White House on Tuesday. They'd planned to keep it quiet until the day itself, but the New York Herald Tribune jumped the gun and now the list is out. Nothing would give me greater pleasure than to print the list entire—it would fill two columns and allow me to go home and read a good book. But I guess I'd better leave it for the news story. Let me note that there are 33 biographies (cheers for Pringle's "Theodore Roosevelt" and for autobiographies by Lincoln Steffens and Frank Lloyd Wright), 15 histories (cheers for Walter Millis' "The Martial Spirit"), 11 travel and adventure (no especial cheers), 24 volumes of poetry, art, and drama (cheers for every single mystery tales, and 23 books for one, except T. E. Lawrence's translation of the "Odyssey," which I think something less than lukewarm), 9 science, 8 economics and current events (perfectly chosen), and 5 miscellaneous (from "Webster's New International" to F. P. Stieff's "Eat, Drink, and Be Merry in Maryland"). Also, 61 novels, 11 children. All these are to bring up-to-date the White House library, begun in 1930 by a gift of 500 books from this most generous association. The bookplate to go in each volume, reproduced here, has its interest. Daniel Berkeley Updike, America's premier printer, designed it. The type ornaments of the border were the first cast in this country, created just after the War of 1812, at about the time the White House itself was built.

Simon & Schuster have taken over the rights to the 21 books which Theodore Dreiser has written during the last 34 years, and will duly publish them from now on. Mr. Sabatini sat down to his typewriter and allowed himself one word in reply—"Abdicate." Best extravagant item from the week's books—Arnold Haskell's "Balletomania" (Simon & Schuster) records a strange rite that some St. Petersburg maniacs on the ballet performed in adoration of the great La Taglioni. They bought a pair of her dancing slippers for 200 rubles, had them cooked and served up with a special sauce, and devoured them at a banquet.

Pair Charged With Perjury

Testimony of Couple Sent Two Men to Prison in Assault Case.

Their testimony which sent two men to the penitentiary attacked as perjury, Miss Jean Kerns, 21, and Herbert T. Newman, both of the 1300 block of Eleventh street northwest, were turned over to Maryland authorities yesterday in Police Court.

The pair were chief witnesses against Oliver L. Decatur, 31, and Raymond E. Zell, 20, both of Washington, who were convicted last July at La Plata, Md., of simple assault. Zell and Decatur were sentenced to three years in the Maryland House of Correction.

Miss Kerns and Newman were arrested on a warrant sworn by Miss Nora Zell, sister of one convicted man. Zell and Decatur were charged with criminal assault and simple assault on Miss Kerns while returning to Washington from North Beach, Md.

The two men were acquitted of the criminal assault charge but convicted of simple assault. Both defendants contended they had been drinking with Miss Kerns and Newman at North Beach before starting back. Miss Kerns and Newman said they had never seen the men before accepting a lift in their car.

Curing Burns.

I have no medical knowledge whatever; whenever there is anything the matter with me, I consult a good physician.

I have often wondered why so many persons, when a portion of their skin is burned by fire, die; what causes death? Dr. Roy McClure, head of the Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, in a published booklet called "Contributions of the Late Edward C. Davidson, M. D., to the Pathology and Therapeutics of Thermal and Chemical Burns," describes the famous treatment of burns by tannic acid; something of general interest, and of enormous importance to sufferers. Dr. McClure writes me:

"Dissemination of newer medical knowledge is still somewhat slow. Whereas in the centers in which tannic acid treatment of burns is being used, the death rate has been reduced about 70 per cent, the total death rate in the country has been but little reduced."

Edward Clark Davidson was born in Pittsburgh, July 2, 1894. He was graduated from Harvard and from Johns Hopkins Medical School, and was a pupil of Dr. McClure at the Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, rising rapidly in responsible positions. He performed successfully a large number of major operations, and his early death in 1933 was a severe loss to the world.

His specialty was in the discovery and use of tannic acid for burns, and he handled a great many cases, as there were occasional explosions with resulting burns in the automobile factories and elsewhere.

In many cases the extent of the burned area was of greater seriousness than its depth; sometimes people recovered quickly from what looked like a bad burn, and others died from a burn that at first seemed slight. Dr. Davidson began to make scientific investigations; the result is stated as follows:

"Although he received it with a modesty tending toward self-effacement, Dr. Davidson's great reward for devising the tannic acid treatment of burns associated with his name was the honor of joining the relatively small company of those whose discoveries have saved untold amounts of suffering, uncounted lives and great economic loss for their own and all future generations of mankind."

An immense number of children's lives have been saved by this treatment; it ought to be universally known.

"They came to the mine in the still morn . . marching quietly, with desperation and grim resolve in their haggard faces. Slowly . . silently . . they descended into the black depths of the coal mine. When all of the 1,200 reached the narrow corridors, 500 feet below, they sent up their ultimatum: Death!"

Why should a thousand men choose to commit suicide . . burying themselves alive in the bowels of the earth . . forsaking broken, weeping wives and children to end their own misery rather than struggle any longer for an empty existence?

"Millbrook" To Be Scene Of Gay Party

Miss Richardson Will Be Guest of Honor on October 27.

Overalls and Ginghams Will Be Worn at Halloween Fete.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Millbrook, the quaint old home of Commander and Mrs. Arthur W. Radford, out near Fairfax, Va., will be the scene of a gaily informal Halloween party October 26 in honor of Miss Randolph Richardson, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Richardson, of Virginia.

The invitations are clever little woodcuts of an old-fashioned "farm lassie," apron, sunbonnet and all, and the guests are to come as lads and lassies, clad in overalls and ginghams, with a trimming of hay and straw here and there.

The merrymaking will start a 7 o'clock, when there will be an oyster roast out in the open, using the old stone fireplace that saw every-day service years ago. In case of inclement weather, the roasting will take place indoors in one of the handsome old carved fireplaces downstairs.

The old three-story home is of red sandstone and was built in the early part of the eighteenth century. It sits way back from a typical country road between the Lee and Jackson highways, not far from the little town of Chantilly. The original wainscoting that was put in 214 years ago by the builder and first owner is still intact and the doors still held by "H. L." hinges swing to and fro without a squeak. The estate gets its name of "Millbrook" from the old mill which is still standing at one end of the spacious garden and from the crystal clear stream that flows across one corner and under a wee bridge.

Commander and Mrs. Radford, being in the Navy, have lived in nearly all parts of this country and many portions of foreign lands. One summer, while out in Virginia, they happened to pass Millbrook, which was then the home of the Rixey Smiths, and decided it was the very place for them. For the present they will live there as often as Eastern station will permit.

PILLAR TO POST

IMPORTANT women plainly dressed. Prominent women and women not so prominent, modishly gowned. But whether they were of the smart set, smartly attired or merely smart, they listened avidly while a young man discused the one subject that united them all—clothes! He was a great husky of a young man, not one of those effete fashion designers or couturiers with a name like Pierre or Marcel. Just plain John M. Keating, general counsel for the dress code. The good-looking husky was introduced by his tiny and inordinately proud aunt, Mrs. Edward Keating, wife of a former Representative from Colorado, at a luncheon in the Women's Democratic Club the other day.

• • • •

Among the important women, there was, first and foremost, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, dressed in the plainest of gray tailored suits with a simple white silk blouse, a plain black felt hat and very plain low-heeled shoes. Not a woman, one could see, who had ever been supremely interested in personal adornment. Yet, she listened attentively with a calm face while Mr. Keating discussed clothes and clothes makers. Mrs. John H. Russell, wife of the commandant of the Marine Corps, was the guest of Mrs. Hugh Mathews, and with them was youthful Mrs. Jordan D. Hill, smartly tailored in gray with a chartreuse blouse and a rakish gray felt hat upon her Titian tresses.

• • • •

MRS. MARK BRISTOL, wife of the admiral, with a bit gray curls framing a piquant face, asked many questions. Mrs. Lawrence Groner, wife of the associate justice, District Court of Appeals, also had questions to ask, and Mrs. Huston Thompson wanted to know where to look for the NRA label—and was told to look in the plaquet—not around the neckline. Miss Eleanor Connally sat at the speakers' table with Miss Mary Patten, one of the three sisters famous for conducting a political salon.

• • • •

What did the young man talk about? The bill of $800,000,000 worth of dresses that the American husband receives annually—and weeps over. Mr. Keating admitted that he received part of that bill himself, and wondered sometimes just why those dresses were bought. He described it as a chaotic industry before the code went into effect—with everybody cutting everybody else's throat—and nobody making a great deal of money.

• • • •

THE mortality of the dress-making business is very high, and most of the leading manufactures, Mr. Keating said, are under 35 years of age, the older men being forced out of business by the keen competition of those younger. One of the main purposes of the code is to prevent style piracy, which is important to women who do not wish to meet the same dresses for which they have paid high prices to get "exclusive" models. Another of the big problems are the dresses returned to the manufacturer as "unsalable" and which account for $120,000,000 annually.

• • • •

MR. KEATING amused his hearers by telling of a store in New York that sells these dresses sent back to the manufacturers. It was a "self-serve" store where you took dresses from the rack and tried them on with a lot of others in one long room, with a husky woman at each end to see that you did not walk out with any of them. A refined woman from Boston was trying on one of these dresses and she poked her elbow into the eye of another, evidently from the East Side.

"Oh, I am so sorry," said the Boston woman contritely.

"Aw, yer too perlite," snarled the other. "You ought to be tradin' up on Fifth avenue!"

Large Turnout At Horse Show Is Anticipated

Invitations to Event October 27 Are Accepted by Notables.

There has been much activity at the Maryland-Parkway-Meadowbrook Club Horseshow Grounds the last few days. Many prominent people were out to look over the ground and prospective layout of boxes for the horse and hound show and race meet on October 27. Among them were the Italian Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso, who has reserved two boxes for guests from the Diplomatic Corps.

Capt. Alvin C. Moore vanned his high-school horse "Prepossession" in from Fort Humphries last Wednesday and put him through the intricate high-school movements. The Riding and Hunt Club pack of hounds were also brought in on that date to determine the best layout and route for the fox-hound race, which will be one of the features of the show.

Jumps Trouble Riders.

The new course of jumps seem to bother the riders more than the horses. The show grounds are opened for schooling any clear day, so that exhibitors may try the new layout of jumps, such as the log, the water, the bank and the Hitchcock fence jumps. All these jumps are classed as "broad," and, consequently, require speed, determination and nerve of both the horse and the rider, and particularly the latter, if they are to be cleared.

Much interest is also being shown in the style show. A program for this will be printed and distributed and interesting descriptions of various fall styles will be given over the amplifiers.

A large demand for boxes is reported, and the following persons have reserved boxes:

Mr. J. J. Cotter, Mr. Harry Semmes, Dr. Fred R. Sanderson, Mr. R. B. Cummings, Mr. A. G. Slater, Mr. Clarence Aspinwall, Mr. D. E. Buckingham, Mr. John Letts, Mr. F. W. MacKenzie, Mr. John Shumaker, Mr. Beverly J. Smith, Mr. Alvey Reeves, Mr. Charles Denny, Mrs. Wallace Chiswell, Mr. George Harris, Mr. Paul Reyes, Mrs. E. T. Goodman, Mrs. John Graf, Mr. Milton King, Mrs. E. J. Dawley, Mrs. Tilghman Hendrick, and Mrs. Charles Thomas.

Distinguished Guests.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen; Maj. Gen. Leon B. Kromer, chief of Cavalry; Maj. Gen. Louis H. Bash, the quartermaster general; Mr. and Mrs. Stuart S. Janney, Baltimore, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert O'Conor, attorney general, State of Maryland; Mr. Ralph Norton, secretary, District Commissioners, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Marshall Finnan, National Capital Park Service.

Mr. Dan Sands will bring his famous Middleburg pack to the hound show. This pack has won many prizes throughout the country.

The flat race and the two steeplechase races are over a spectacular course including up and down hill.

The chief of Protocol Division of the Department of State, Mr. James Clement Dunn, has been joined by Mrs. Dunn at their home on Observatory Circle. Mrs. Dunn spent the summer in Newport where Mr. Dunn joined her for frequent short visits.

Store Carries Turf Fashions Of Every Kind

Connecticut Avenue Shop Has Thousands of Things for Home.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT'S IMPOSSIBLE to visit a local "turf shop" without wanting to join the ranks of horsewomen. There's everything there that would make a plain "lady rider" look like a fashion-plate. And there's everything—except a horse—that would make riding a rare pleasure.

Full-fashion English riding sweaters in soft, washable lisle are the first tempters. After trying on one in yellow, orange, or luscious brown, and adjusting the sporty turtle-neck, you welcome the news that it's within the easy $1.95 reach.

As for the jodhpurs at home—they go in the wastebasket after you see those ultra-English models that lace snugly around the ankle. There's a story about these. An ingenious manufacturer copied them directly from the $12.50 styles and sells them now for half that price.

Some hand-knit string riding gloves were half hidden in the showcase, but it is easy to see what a snappy touch they will add to your get-up.

Anybody awarding prizes would give one to the fur-felt riding hats. These are one shape off and another on—in fact, any shape you prefer. They're so soft and pliable that you can turn them down one way, pull them up another and still have a hat that spells style. Off-hand, they resemble derbies—but they fit better and are infinitely more adaptable to a variety of coiffures. Imagine paying only $3.50!

One pigskin riding belt looks like a $5 bargain, but it turns out to be only $1. It fastens with a clasp combining miniature stirrups and crop. Another one, which costs 50 cents more, has a "bit buckle."

Crops, amazingly low at $3, are surmounted with hand-carved heads. Some have plainer tabs made from genuine onyx.

A large assortment of sporty breeches includes some wool ones which sell for $8 ordinarily, but at present are specials for $4.95.

Things for the Home.

On Connecticut avenue there's a store that has thousands of things women want for their homes. It's interesting to walk through the store and view the beautiful silver and glassware, the linens, and all the "come hither" items.

In a certain section is a gift department simply loaded with irresistibles. One of these is a cream and suger set made of bright and shining, non-tarnishable chrome.

Linen Handkerchiefs.

Irish linen handkerchiefs are both lovely for ornament and also practical. Their 12-inch size makes them sensible where smaller, sheerer ones would be only for appearances. If you buy now, while the buying is good, you can purchase half a dozen of these for 59 cents. Each one is embroidered with your initial.

Parasols Repaired.

When a ruthless wind plays tag with one's very best parasol it's some consolation to know that Washington boasts an umbrella shop where expert repairing is done.

And the grand part is, the repairing costs lots less than a new umbrella!

Umbrella tips are replaced for 35 cents. Ribs for 35 or 50 cents, depending on the type you choose. Handles are restored for as little as 15 cents, and handle cords furnished for 25 cents.

Re-covering in either silk or gloria costs only a trifle, and the cover is on to stay!

Besides the repair work that goes on here, there's also a bit of selling, for the shop has a wide assortment of umbrellas ranging from the wee folding ones to those that open out in tent-like dimensions.

There are handles galore to choose from—engraved silver ones, wood or composition. In fact, anything in an umbrella way is taken care of here.

Mammoth Garment Bags.

Garment bags have staged a sudden evolution. From the staid old-style things that buttoned or clasped up the side they have suddenly turned into mammoth bags 62 inches large, with zipper fastenings. Their sturdy wire frames are proof against tilting and the glazed chintz from which they're made keeps the dust from seeping through.

It's an easy matter to get eight garments into them—and you might crowd ten.

A Tart Layer Cake.

A fresh lemon layer cake is made from yellow batter, plus the juice and rinds of fresh lemons. It is particularly tasty to those who prefer even their sweet things tart.

These sell for 35 cents in a certain pastry shop.

Buffet Bowl Centerpiece.

A buffet bowl made of heavy Oriental brass and designed with intricate Oriental figures rests on a teakwood stand.

Used as the centerpiece for a dining room table, and piled high with fruits it's all that an artist would call inspiring. It may, of course, remain in the living room and be used as a nut bowl. It's sufficiently attractive to be used all by itself.

Like any other young woman, Miss Carol Stone, youngest daughter of the actor, Fred Stone, likes ice-cream sodas and French pastries, but to maintain her ideal stage weight of 117 pounds she eats fruits instead.

Appearing With Father in "Jayhawker" at National Theater, She Is as Careful of Colors as She Is of Her Selection of Food.

By Frances Mangum.

THERE WAS a sly twinkle in her eyes as she pulled a mysterious package from her pocketbook and poured out its powdery contents.

"Wherever you find me, you find saccharin," laughed Miss Carol Stone, youngest daughter of the Broadway song and dance king, Fred Stone. "I use it in place of sugar to ward off extra weight," she explained.

For the last week both father and daughter have been appearing here in "Jayhawker" at the National Theater.

Was Skinniest Thing.

"When I was ever and ever so little," she said, "I was the skinniest thing imaginable, but unless I watch my "p's and q's" and my ice cream sodas, sundaes and French pastries, I gain like nobody's business!"

It was hard to believe. Her 117 pounds graced her 5 feet 4 inches of height so well that dieting seemed out of the question.

"I do diet, though," confessed Miss Stone. "I'm not always so lucky as to wear the voluminous skirts of 'The Jayhawker,' so I have to keep a standing friendship with the scales.

"As yet, I haven't taken solely to eggs and orange juice, or just bananas and milk, but I keep my weather eye—or 'weight eye'—on desserts and things like that," she continued.

"Wouldn't Dare Pastry."

"I wouldn't dare a pie or a pastry. I eat fruits instead. And as for sugar—I'm scared to death of it! People probably think I'm a funny sort when they see me open my bag, take out my saccharin sack and help myself from that instead of the sugar bowl."

Bread and potatoes also are on her taboo list, she added, although she's very fond of both of them.

"But I'm fonder of staying the right weight," she added.

Miss Stone is as careful of colors as she is of her diet.

"Off stage I suppose I'm not as strict about them as I should be," she said. "When I select a dress, I choose on the basis of style. Subconsciously though, color is always nagging me. I start out a season with a dress or two of one color and the first thing I know my whole wardrobe is saturated with that color.

"It's gray this season," she explained, indicating her gray caracul coat, gray hat, shoes and dress.

Green No Jinx to Her.

Green, she says, is considered a jinx by most stage folk. They feel about wearing it in a play just as some people do about turning over the salt or walking under a ladder.

"I guess I'm not superstitious," she said. "for I wear green a lot. It seems to be one of my colors."

It was easy to see that it was. Her deep auburn hair is a shade that green turns into a burnished triumph. She wears it in two coils low on the back of her neck, but out to the side enough to be easily visible from the front.

"I do this," she explained, "to make the lower part of my face seem narrower. And I fluff it out here," she motioned to her temples—"to broaden my forehead. If I didn't, my face would be too oval for words!"

Magistrate Raps Women's Court

New Yorker Is Preparing Plan to Abolish It.

New York, Oct. 19 (Spl.).—The Women's Court was described by Magistrate Anna M. Kross yesterday as "the most unfortunate of courts," and in an address at the annual harvest luncheon of the Sisterhood of Congregation B'nai Jeshurun she said she was preparing a plan for its abolition.

Magistrate Kross declared that if she could succeed in abolishing the court it would be an achievement in her career.

"I asked, 'Is there a Bible around here?' and was told there wasn't," Mrs. Kross said. said, 'There no wonder. In this damned place there shouldn't be a Bible!'"

Child Chats

Buy Material and Let Children Make Halloween Decorations.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

CHILDREN love the fables and the fantasy connected with Halloween and enjoy a party based on this festivity more than any other except Christmas. Don't let the work deter you from giving such a party, for the effort involved can be reduced to a minimum.

Decorations are inexpensive if you buy the materials and let the children make them. The preparations are half the fun, and two or three friends can be called in to help. Give them orange and black crepe paper, stencils for witches and pumpkins, and let them manufacture the trimmings. Let them hollow out two or three pumpkins for Jack o' Lanterns, and make apples on the stick for souvenirs. If you haven't the recipe for that delectable tidbit, write and ask Dorothea Duncan for it, addressing her in care of The Washington Post.

No new games are needed because the children enjoy the old, familiar favorites on this occasion—ducking for apples, telling fortunes, and races to see who can carry a potato or a few grains of rice across the room on a knife. Consult any good book of games for suggestions, or write me for suggestions too lengthy to publish here.

(Tuesday: Counteracting Fear.)

For personal advice on problems of child management, write Alice Fox Pitts, in care of The Washington Post.

Own Home Called Best for the Child

All States But Three Provide for Such Care.

The best place for a child is his own home, no matter whether his parents or the State are supporting him. This general principle has been agreed upon by all the States but three, according to a recently completed study by the Children's Bureau, of the statutory provisions for aid from public funds.

The three dissenting States are Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina. Alabama has provided a more general form of public provision than the majority of States for home care of dependent children.

All other States provide for public aid in the children's own homes while the children are under 16. Colorado aids young people in their homes until they are 18. Michigan and Tennessee have set 17 as the maximum age for taking care of dependents outside institutions.

Most States set no definite sum for aiding the child within his home. California, however, allows a maximum of $20 a month for each.

Pattern No. 705.

HERE IS A DRESS that will achieve for you that "long-legged" look that smart young things aim for this season.

The gored skirt, though slim, has a pleasant fullness. The long, straight sleeves fasten at the cuffs and are decorated by buttons. The soft, crushed girdle encircles the waist and fastens simply.

Dark silk is suggested for the dress, with collar contrasting. Black, with pastel collar, would be an effective combination. The pattern is cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 18 (36) requires 3¾ yards of 39-inch fabric; ⅝ yard for the collar.

Recipe Contest To Be Devoted To Left-Overs

WHAT DO YOU do when you have left-over meats or vegetables? Throw them away or save them to combine in some delightful disguise for an ensuing meal?

Often the most appetizing item on a menu is a left-over dish into which the housewife has put her creative culinary art. Every resourceful homemaker has some individual recipes for these left-over dishes and now she may have an opportunity to share them with the public and prehaps also win a cash prize.

The Post's recipe contest next week will be devoted to left-over dishes. For the best recipe submitted $3 will be awarded; for the second best, $2, and for the third best, $1.

Address all communications to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor, The Washington Post. Recipes should be typed if possible. If not, the writing should be clear and in pen and ink. Recipes should be checked carefully for omissions. The full name and address of the sender should appear on each separate sheet.

Contributions should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

Culbertson on Bridge

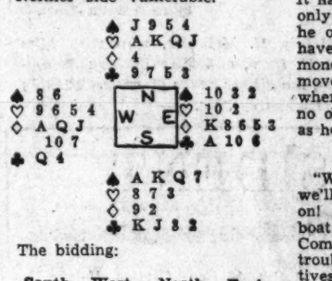
Passive Defense.

There are many active measures a defensive player may take to bring about the Declarer's downfall. Honors may be underled, entries may be knocked out, Aces may be held up, and so on. On certain hands, however, the best line of defense that can be adopted is a passive one. In other words, the player should merely avoid the issue in the all-important suit as long as possible and thus make the Declarer do all the guessing. As a result of this defensive policy, which West followed in spite of the fact that it involved giving Declarer a ruff and discard, the Declarer on today's hand went down 1 trick.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	2◇	3♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened his fourth best heart, and the Dummy naturally won the trick. Declarer proceeded to draw three rounds of trumps, and then ran his heart suit, discarding one of his two diamonds on Dummy's fourth heart. It was unfortunate from the South player's angle that the discard on the heart could do him no good whether a diamond or a club was chosen. The fourth heart was cashed merely to strip both hands of that suit, and the diamond was finally selected as a discard so that both hands would be stripped of that suit also after one round. After the fourth heart was cashed a low club was led from Dummy. East ducked, and Declarer played the Jack from his own hand, West winning the trick with the Queen.

The West player had followed the play very carefully and knew that the Declarer's original distribution could only have been 4-4-3-2, with four cards in the club suit. With more than two diamonds in the South hand the Declarer would most certainly have attempted to ruff them in Dummy before playing all three rounds of trump. With this as a basis, West realized that the only hope of defeating the contract lay in the ability of his side to take two more club tricks. From the bidding he knew the Declarer was marked with the club King, if not the Ace, and therefore that to lead the four would only save the Declarer a guess. West finally laid down the Act of diamonds and followed with the Queen, not caring about the ruff and discard he was giving to South, as with three clubs still in his hand South could not fulfill his contract by discarding only one.

The diamond lead was naturally trumped with Dummy's last trump and a club discarded. A club was now led from Dummy for the show down. East was equally aware of the situation and played the Ten-spot. South was, of course, completely on the spot. He knew that if East held the club Ace, he could make the hand by going up with his King, but that if the Ace was in the West hand and if it was now blank, he could make the contract only by not going up with the King. Of course there was a very good chance of the Ace being blank if the West player held it, as the defense between them had held only five cards in the suit originally. After a long huddle the Declarer decided, basing his decision on the fact that West had failed to continue clubs, that the club Ace was behind him. Of course, East's Ten held the trick and the Ace was now cashed for the setting trick. It is true that Declarer could have and perhaps should have guessed the situation correctly, but the defense made it as difficult as they possibly could.

Hollanders Not "Dutch."

The word "Dutch" has been officially banned according to a recent circular issued by the ministry of education of Holland.

The circular says "Dutch" must be replaced by Netherland. The action is taken to remove all possibility of confusion bttween "Dutch" and "Deutsch," the word used to designate the German people.

Jennifer Hale

By Rob Eden

Jennifer Hale, wanted in Los Angeles in connection with the murder of David Corey, has escaped to Seattle under the assumed name of Mary Dixon. She meets Kent Severn, who gives her a job in his father's office, and makes friendly overtures which, under the circumstances, she feels she can not accept.

THIS had been one of those days, and Kent was weary. He had been in conference two hours with his father, and the two hours seemed like 20 years. Now with Mary in his office, his father's searing criticism was rolling away from him. How soothing she was to him! Even when he walked through the outer office and glanced her way, catching her shy smile, he felt uplifted, better. The day didn't seem so hard, the work didn't seem so hard, his father didn't seem so unreasonable.

"Sit down, please." He pulled out a chair for her.

"I have to be going——"

"That's what you said yesterday. It isn't going to be this way forever, is it, Mary? Some day those pesky relatives of yours are leaving town, and you can go out with me. Can't you get away from them tonight?"

Mary shook her head. She didn't take the chair. She remained standing by the desk.

"Sure they really are relatives? That you're not turning me down for another boy friend?"

"Sure."

Couldn't Understand.

"I can't understand such devotion to relatives. When ours come to town I leave the house—can't stand 'em. Your uncle and aunt from Kansas, you say?"

"From Kansas," Mary repeated. Four days ago she had told him that lie, and she shivered now every time he recalled it. She had had to tell him something, give him some excuse for not going out as he wanted her to go in the evenings and the fictitious relatives had popped into her mind. She felt the same way about Kent as she felt about Nita. That she couldn't accept his friendship completely because of the consequences to him—if Jennifer Hale were discovered in Seattle. Yet she couldn't explain to him why she couldn't. All she could do was lie, and lie and lie. It had been a mistake, she realized only too clearly, to accept the job he offered her. She should never have done it. With what little money she had, she should have moved on to some other place—where there was no Kent Severn, no one who wanted her friendship as he apparently did.

Persistent Refusal.

"Why not ditch them tonight, and we'll have dinner together! Come on! After dinner we'll get into my boat and go for a ride up the lake. Come on—that way, I'll forget my troubles and you'll forget the relatives!"

"Not tonight—really I couldn't. My aunt's getting dinner for me."

"After dinner, then?"

"No——"

Kent's mouth tightened. "I've got a notion, Mary, that this relative stuff is all the bunk. That you don't want to go out with me. That true?"

"As soon as they go, I'll go out with you." If she could only keep up the fiction of the aunt and uncle from Kansas until Kent got tired of asking her!

"Tomorrow night?" he asked, hopefully.

"Not tomorrow."

"You know you're sort of a mysterious person, Mary. I don't understand you. Sometimes I think I know you—when we were on the Ardeth, I thought I'd known you all my life. Since you've worked for me — you seem so strange. I don't know what's come over you. You seem almost like another person. I like you, and I want to be friends, and yet I feel that you don't want me to be a friend. I've told myself it's because you're working for me, and yet I know that it isn't true, because after what we've been through together—the Grace Larsen was a bit of an experience, wasn't it?—you couldn't feel that way about me. Certainly you should accept me as a friend. You shouldn't let the fact that I'm your immediate boss stand in the way. That doesn't matter to me, except in business hours, and it shouldn't to you. I wouldn't be asking you to go out if I didn't want to. Get me?"

Was He Suspicious?

Mary's hand found the edge of the desk, and her fingers gripped it as hard as they could. Was he suspicious? Perhaps she should get out more, do normal, natural things to avert suspicion. It was only because she didn't want to involve anyone in her troubles, in the skein of her life that was so tangled, that she had stayed so much to herself. And Kent was so fine—she couldn't bear to think what might happen, what he might say, if he ever knew——

"You don't get me, Mary." He sat down on the edge of the desk, dejected. "You don't get me at all. Maybe it was another girl on the Ardeth——"

"I do, Kent, and I guess I can get away—tomorrow night." As soon as the words left her lips, she wanted to take them back. But they were spoken and Kent was smiling broadly, slapping the desk, and saying, "Good! Dinner at the Yacht Club and then our trip on the lake. Now, can I drop you at your home?"

Mary thanked him, but refused and left the office.

All the way down the hall to the locker room, she kept telling herself that she shouldn't have consented. That it was a mistake. That it wasn't a fair thing to do to Kent when he had been so good to her. Then she was saying that it was only for once to make him feel she wasn't mysterious, to avert any suspicions he might have. Only for once!

Confidence Asked.

"Kent Severn sent for you again tonight, I hear." Nita was standing in front of the mirror pulling her hat over her straight dark hair. She was the only one in the locker room, the others having gone by this time.

"Yes, business, about some cost sheets I was typing—"

"Yeah? I imagine. If Kent Severn wanted to talk about cost sheets he would have talked about them to Rose Shepherd. She's the gal who ought to be talked to about cost sheets. Besides, in the three years I've worked for him, Kent Severn has never given a girl in this office a tumble. Never even looked at one of us—until you came along. Rose says he's batty about you."

"It isn't true!"

Her Big Hero.

"No?" Well, what does he go to your desk so much for, then? And when he comes into the office in the morning, do you think he looks at any of us the way he looks at you? Say, I'm not blind. His face spreads a mile when he's giving you a good morning. More power to you, Mary. At least, you've done what none of us ever could—get him interested in you. Like him?"

"Of course. Everybody likes him."

"I could go for him in a big way, if he ever looked my way—but he hasn't, and he probably won't," Nita sighed.

Kent, from the day she had started working for him, was the big hero in her life, and yet she wasn't jealous of his attentions to Mary. She enjoyed it. Personally it was a triumph, and if she ever found out that Kent and Mary went out together, she was due to collect $1 from a boy friend in the bookkeeping department who had bet her yesterday that Kent was unassailable where stenographers were concerned.

"But I wouldn't let Mamma Severn get too close to you, darling," she advised dusting her nose with another layer of powder. "She's got Kent's life pretty well planned out for him, even if he doesn't suspect it. There are rumors around town that she wants him to marry Emily Vinson. I guess everybody knows it but Kent—"

Coconut Wins As Pie Recipes Flood Office

Paradise and Red Tavern Take Second and Third Prizes.

MAKE WAY for America's favorite dish—pie! Judging from the number of recipes that come in this week, pie is the American housewives' favorite recipe. So, after quite a struggle and an increasing appetite (for the recipes looked so good) the judges selected the winners.

Here they are: Mrs. Claudia Rice Scott, 1423 Decatur street, received first prize, $3, for an original recipe from a native West Indian cook. Second prize, $2, was awarded Mrs. Pearch P. Smith, 525 Roxbury place northwest, and third prize, $1, was awarded Mrs. W. F. Brennan, 1211 Ingraham street northwest.

Their recipes appear in order.

Louise's Coconut Pie.

2 eggs
2 cups milk
4 tablespoons sugar
1 level tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups fresh grated coconut

Beat cornstarch into egg yolks, add milk and sugar, boil mixture until thick like custard. Add vanilla. Put half the mixture into the unbaked crust. Into this pour the grated coconut, add remainder of filling. Bake in hot oven (about 425 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. Make a meringue of egg whites and six tablespoons sugar. Place on top of pie and brown slightly.

Ingredients for crust: 1½ cups flour, ¼ teaspoon baking powder, about 4 tablespoons water, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Paradise Pie.

4 large apples
1 wine glass sherry
3 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
3 tablespoons apricot jam
2-3 cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 portion plain pastry.

Sift together the sugar, flour, salt and nutmeg. Peel and slice apples. Line a pie pan with plain pastry, add some of the apples, sprinkle with sugar mixture, and repeat until apples and sugar are used up. Spread the top with the apricot jam, dot with butter, and cover with the crust prepared the following way:

Roll out the crust large enough to cover pie. Take a clean thimble and punch about six or seven holes in the crust. Cover pie, seal the edges, brush top with milk, place in a hot oven (450° Fahrenheit) for 15 minutes, then reduce heat and bake 30 minutes longer.

Remove from oven and introduce the sherry wine, through the holes on the top of the crust. Cool and serve.

Red Tavern Pie.

1 cup mashed cooked carrots
1½ cups tart apple pulp
1 cup sugar
1 large orange
½ cup chopped raisins
1 tablespoon butter
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon salt

Combine carrots, apple pulp, sugar, orange juice and grated rind, chopped raisins and salt, put saucepan over low flame and cook until thick and clear. Then add butter and nutmeg and pour into a baked pastry shell. Economical but very good.

Loud Radios in Paris.

The recent suit of a well-known Parisian against a neighbor for maintaining a public nuisance in the form of a radio has been thrown out of court. The prefect of police says he has no authority to limit the loudness of radios in private homes or the hour at which they can be turned on. Only if the noise distrubs the "general tranquillity of the neighborhood" can he interfere.

How to Keep Well

Preventable Mental Disease.

WE all recognize the close relationship that exists between physical and mental health, and we may paraphrase the old saying, "A sane mind in a sound body."

Students of insanity recognize that mental disease may arise from organic causes, the evidence of which is manifested by actual and visible changes in the brain itself. On the other hand, certain mental derangements may exist with no evidence of organic disease whatsoever. Such conditions are called functional.

No one has defined exactly what the mind is, but we do know that the mind receives impressions through the sense organs and these may be pleasant or quite the reverse. Impressions create a state of mind, and their effect upon the individual and their influence upon his conduct and his thinking will depend upon his environment, his education, the attitude of those about him, and the state of his general health.

One of the most important causes of organic mental diseases is syphilis. This disease accounts for 15 per cent or more of all cases admitted to hospitals for the insane and is attended with a well-nigh incalculable economic loss. The disability and suffering that accompanies it can scarcely be comprehended.

Second among the organic causes of insanity may be listed the psychoses induced by the excessive and persistent use of alcohol. Although but 6 per cent of the admissions to hospitals for the insane are definitely ascribed to alcohol, yet this drug is by most authorities held responsible directly or indirectly for 25 per cent of cases of mental deterioration.

In the third group of exciting factors of organic insanity must be mentioned diseases of the circulatory system. High blood pressure with destruction of capillaries and narrowing and plugging of important blood vessels may lead to decreased circulation in the brain and hence the mental symptoms.

Syphilis is a disease of which we know the cause, the methods of prevention, and the mode of cure. With proper and rigorous preventive measures on the part of city, State, and Nation the disease could be practically eliminated in a dozen years. Vice conditions keep alive sources of infection, and the weak and uninformed are exposed to this terrible menace. Rome fell under the scourge of malaria. If modern civilization is to advance or even survive, much more rigorous measures will be required to stem the tide of syphilitic infections. Insanity is only one of the terminal stages of the disease. There are other phases of its ravages equally disabling.

If the Nation could be trained away from the immoderate use of alcohol, a reduction in the number of psychoses would be rather promptly observed. Particularly should this training apply to the period of early manhood and womanhood when the nervous system is especially susceptible to the action of toxins. Naturally enough the weakest nervous systems exhibit the grossest manifestations of lack of control. Such nervous mechanisms are more easily damaged. In other words, those with stable nervous systems control the use of alcohol. The unstable individual may succumb to its excessive use.

Circulatory disease is in a very positive way influenced by both syphilis and alcohol. Nevertheless, infections play an important part and sometimes mental deterioration occurs following damage to the blood vessels.

We may safely say then that the control of some of the most important phases of mental disease lie within the scope of public health. When the individual will not or can not protect himself; when thereby he becomes a menace to others, organized society must intervene.

Perspires at Night.

C. H. writes: My 10-year-old brother perspires a great deal at night regardless of the weather. What does it mean?

Reply.

Is the child pale, thin, and underweight? If so, tuberculosis should be suspected.

Riding Kit Is One of Horsemen's Biggest Assets; Outfits Suggested to Fit Individual Tastes

Breeches Come In Many Colors And Patterns

Coats May Be Loud or Somber; Tweeds and Roughwear Smart.

By M. A. Weiss.

ENTER THE SEASON for the man on horseback. Whether it be hacking, point-to-point meets, drags, hunts or just "watching" . . . Mr. Washington goes horsy in a big way. Consider the horse . . . he is generally a spirited animal whose feelings are often wounded by the garish. By all means, since we don't want him to go away offended, let us consider one of the most important assets of the horseman . . . his riding kit.

Just a few general hints on the costume that is ideal for park or country riding, before we get to the individual garments themselves. Correctly cut breeches have a "whip" to the looseness from knee to waist, but they are tight from calf to ankle following the tradition of the true British cavalry pattern. The jacket must be cut right or its appearance will disgrace beast and rider. A good "seat" is emphasized by a neat jacket. The skirts should have ample length and flare to set back well over the hips and have sufficient cloth in back and front to drape over the saddle, so that the rider doesn't look like something that happened to the horse. A colorful Tattersall weskit takes away drabness from a brown monotone outfit.

If you're the timid type who is reassured by meeting your counterpart every place you go . . . then the following outfits are not for you. But at Westchester and Long Island and Connecticut, smart riding kits seen this fall included: For hacking, a brown herringbone Shetland sacque, yellow flannel Tattersal waistcoat, blue foulard riding stock with white figures, a black bowler with guard, Shepherd check twill breeches. The scarf is pinned with a heavy bar pin and the boots were field type laced at the instep.

Striking Combination.

Another good-looking combination, recommended for those who spend the better part of the day in the saddle, is a black and white shepherd check riding coat, a scratch felt pork-pie hat, turtle-neck sweater, heavy twill breeches, a postboy waistcoat and box cloth puttees with leather cuffs atop blucher riding shoes.

By no means are these limited outfits the only correct ones. We've seen them on men who set the fashion pace and liked them, and that is why we comment on them. However, taking each item separately, you may choose for hats the bowler, the pork-pie, or even an old felt hat (never a new one) and be correct. However, don't wear a cap, and don't go riding bare-headed.

In neckwear you can choose from the ratcatcher, which ties into a bow knot, the hacking scarf, the throw scarf, or the more formal white puff. The wool shirt with silk neckband and one-button front is sensible. It's known as the "Dozi." However, your taste and neck-scarf will dictate your choice of shirts.

Breeches come in a variety of patterns and colors, but just a word of warning—steer clear of freak colors and don't wear jodhpurs—in the male it's an affectation. Riding coats may be as loud or somber as you please. Tweeds and roughwear, of course, are the smarf fabrics. Be careful, however, to correlate your jacket with the rest of your kit. See that the shirt is lined with waterproof or oiled silk. Horses perspire, and it ruins the skirts of any jacket not so fashioned.

Boots are important. The conventional cavalry boot is always in good taste. The darker the better for the horsy set, especially when they reach (through polishing and boning) the blood-brown of cordovan leather. Don't wear black boots except for show and other formal riding purposes. Field boots will give you more comfort, since they are laced across the instep. Still more comfortable is the box-cloth puttee with leather cuff, worn with a blucher riding shoe. The Newmarket boot is correct only for country riding.

A word here about the fit. Boots should fit snugly at the calf and be high enough so that the under side of your kneecap touches . . . barely touches . . . the boot-top (when your leg is bent). The instep should be flexible and the toe-cap should allow you to wiggle your toes even after you've put on heavy woolen socks. Put the powder into your boots . . . plenty of powder before starting the day's ride, and you'll not suffer from pinching or burning. If your boot is too loose, you're going to raise a fine crop of friction blisters on your heel, and since you're riding for fun . . . why not make sure your habiliment allows the maximum enjoyment. Marino shorts prevent chafing.

A word about gloves. String gloves in canary or white are smart, but smarter yet are the new string gloves with pigskin backs. One pair we've seen is fleece-lined and is ideal for colder days. The string part enables you to grip leather without slipping and is more durable than the usual leathers used in gloves.

Avoid Ostentatious Crops.

Crops are a matter of choice. Again avoid the ostentatious. A braided thong, loaded head, crop is smart. So is the crooked handle, weighted whangee. Don't wear spurs unless you are an accomplished rider. It's unfair to yourself and the horse and may have accidental serious consequences.

Before and after the ride, polo coats, the short-warm, the balmaccan and covert box-coats are the accepted overcoats. If by this time you're a little saddle-sore, let's switch the subject.

"Libra."

IF OCTOBER 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

On this October 20 it may prove much better to do things slowly and deliberately than in a rush. There might be a chance of your missing an appointment unless you keep track of the time.

If a woman and October 20 is your birthday, you are a natural born leader, especially in affairs of a social nature. Your clear reasoning powers enable you to readily recognize the exact status of affairs involving the question of right or wrong. You might be extremely successful as a modern Portia and should excel in educational work. If you marry, you should be extremely happy, as you can readily adjust yourself to domesticity. You should probably try short story writing or journalistic work of some sort if you do marry, for your brain requires more activity than called for by the duties of housekeeping.

If a man and October 20 is your natal day, you are inclined to be very sagacious and view things in a judicious manner. The medical or legal professions or the lecture platform should enable you to win fame and fortune. In commercial life any line pertaining to finance might possibly prove highly profitable. Men of your type should marry, for with very few exceptions their matrimonial ventures are unusually successful.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion, without being foppish, is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette governing conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the what, when and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

Dinner Kit at Home.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: What is the proper dinner kit, when one is giving a small semiformal dinner at home? Please describe the dinner clothes in detail since I have to buy them. J. P. LEHMERE.

* * * *

Another Derby Query.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: Is it correct to wear a derby with a camel's hair polo coat? Also, what about cuffless trousers? M. B. F.

* * * *

SIR: I wouldn't advise the derby with the coat you describe. Try a bound-edge, snap-brim hat or one of the new scratch felts. I think you'll like it better. Cuffless trousers are coming into style again. I rather favor them, for what are cuffs but dirt and dust-catchers orignating when unskilled tailors made trousers too long.

Lifting the Hat.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: In my office building men always take their hats off when a lady enters the elevator. I have been told this is incorrect. Is it proper or not? ETIQUETTE.

* * * *

SIR: In public places it is not necessary to remove one's hat in an elevator. That has always seemed a bit of superswank nonsense to me, since it focuses embarrassing attention upon a lady who is a stranger to all concerned.

Paging Pot-Pie Hat.

* * * *

SIR: You'll have to send me a self-addressed envelope for the answer to that one.

Men to Wear Loud Colors, Expert Says

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 19.—(AP).—For four reasons, says Raymond G. Twyeffort, men are on the way to becoming year-round Christmas trees in the matter of clothes.

Twyeffort, chairman of the National fashion committee of the American Merchant Tailors' Association, believes the country has started on a "renaissance of color and style," and he attributes it to these factors:

Repeal, more leisure under the New Deal, increasing sophistication of youth and increased use of color and design in modern advertising.

Hence, Twyeffort told a meeting of Pittsburgh's clothing men, these are some of the new developments to be expected within a short time in men's clothing:

Colored straw hats and derbies, red and green tuxedo vests, louder—aye, much louder—plaids for suits, streamlined shoes and summer suits in all the pastel shades of the rainbow.

It all began, Twyeffort continued, last summer, when young men went in heavi! for white mess coats instead of tuxedo coats, and he averred: "The black tuxedo is through for summer wear."

The style expert added: "Men have a yen for color. They like it more than women. But they've been afraid of it. Now they have thrown off that fear."

Twyeffort even believes the new style trend will help bring back prosperity because, he said, "Color is just as essential to a vigorous mentality as diet."

Official Approves Banana-Milk Diet

The banana-and-milk reducing diet has been approved officially by Charles H. Baldwin, New York State commissioner of agriculture and markets.

In a bulletin the commissioner says the diet is scientifically sound. He points out that if it "does nothing but disprove the absurd notion that milk is a fattening food, it will have done a world of good."

The diet was evolved by Dr. George A. Harrup, of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. It consists of a quart of skimmed milk and six ripe bananas daily. Followers of the diet are supposed to adhere to the schedule ten days, eat regular food for two weeks, then go back to the diet and continue the alternating routine. The weight loss should be two or three pounds a week.

Column Fan Expresses Views on Intellectuality in Women.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: This is a fan letter, pure and simple. I just want to express my appreciation of your column in The Post. Your discussions are so intelligent and widely applicable to our problems, without giving us a sense, as so many "columnists" do, of the dreary and dreadful uniformity of human nature.

* * * *

Apropos of "Anonymous'" letter Thursday morning, I confess I would enjoy more discussion of the problem of intellect in women. I am one of the more or less intellectual women, I suppose, and a comment I treasure—perhaps wrongly—is that made by a friend of my husband's, to the effect that I have more brains and conceal them better than any other woman of his acquaintance.

* * * *

I believe most men, no matter how much they like and respect an intelligent woman, secretly and sometimes even fiercely resent an assumption on her part of equality or superiority in their own field. As for myself, I much prefer a man whom I believe—or at least can persuade myself I believe—superior to me. (The eternal feminine!)

* * * *

I see I have expressed myself rather than my gratitude, after all. But thank you for the inspiration and the opportunity. Very sincerely yours, HOUSEWIFE.

Use Brains as Screen.

DEAR HOUSEWIFE: Thank you so much for your expression of appreciation. For those who, like Leigh Hunt's "Abou Ben Adhem," love their fellowmen, the human scene affords no aspect of dreary and dreadful uniformity.

With you, I confess to enjoying discussions pro and con, concerning man's evaluation of intellectual endowment in woman as asset or liability. And I think your husband's friend compressed in a nutshell a cross-section of universal male reaction to the subject when he voiced his pleasure at knowing a woman who had brains, yet concealed them.

* * * *

Certainly the woman who presumes to suppose herself man's mental equal or superior invites masculine resentment and lack of appreciation. And certainly if she's really intelligent, she's mastered the social arts of tact, diplomacy and graciousness, all of which preclude a pyrotechnic display of mental prowess. If she's wise as well as intelligent, she uses her brains as a neutral screen against which the individual man's forensic skill is displayed to best advantage.

* * * *

"And the woman who is essentially feminine always, like you, seeks—and if she fails to find, manufactures—the man to whom she can do intellectual obeisance. Or so I believe.

But I should be interested to know what others think—affirmative or contradictory. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

'Free Trade' Idea In Art Advocated

New York, Oct. 19 (Spl.).—England is "so much the poorer" for its policy of excluding American and other foreign artists from the theaters, Dame Sybil Thorndike, one of England's most beloved actresses, declared yesterday at a luncheon of the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents. Dame Sybil is now appearing in an English play at the Booth Theater.

Dame Sybil spoke in favor of a world-wide return to "free trade" in art ideas. Art, she said, was the human touchstone, which had brought races so "different from one another as the Irish and the English" into closer understanding.

Local Alumnae Leaders To Utilize New Leisure

Miss Dorothy Crook, above, president of the Washington Barnard Club, is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the college women's joint alumni meeting Monday afternoon to listin in on Mrs. Dwight Morrow's radio discussion of "The College Graduate and the New Leisure."

Hundreds Will Attend "Listening-In" Party Monday, With Miss Dorothy Crook as Hostess, When Mrs. Dwight Morrow Speaks Over Radio.

ALTHOUGH they propose to lend an attentive ear to Mrs. Dwight Morrow's radio broadcast Monday evening on "The College Graduate and the New Leisure," Washington alumnae leaders of Smith, Vassar, Barnard, Wellesley, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe and Bryn Mawr colleges for women confess themselves as not being overburdened with the intangible commodity—new or otherwise.

Hostess of the local "listening-in" party—one of hundreds meeting in every city, and almost every hamlet, in the country Monday—will be Miss Doorthy Crook, Barnard, '33.

Of the moot "new leisure," Miss Crook says: "The majority of Barnard alumnae in Washington are very much employed, either in business or the professions, or in making a home. What are we doing, as an alumnae group, about the college graduate and the new leisure?

"We-e-ll, let me see. We're planning an essay contest for high school students, on a subject not yet chosen, to make students more conscious of world affairs. We're rather a new group, you know. We just organized last year, with 30 members."

Made Phi Beta Kappa.

Miss Crook, who majored in political science, made Phi Beta Kappa, and won a scholarship to study at Geneva during her school days, today is junior research assistant with the United States Treasury and president of the Washington Barnard Club.

She is also chairman of the committee making plans for the joint meeting of women's college alumnae here Monday afternoon at the United States Chamber of Commerce, to hear Mrs. Morrow's voice come over a National network from 5 to 5:15 o'clock.

Following Mrs. Morrow's talk, Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre will discuss "Women's Colleges Need of Endowments." The public is invited to be present.

Such leisure as Vassar College graduates possess is divided between creating a permanent scholarship fund, and forming public opinion on the civic and humanitarian necessity of maintaining a high standard of public school education, despite the depression—it was told by Miss Rebecca Elting, Vassar, '08.

Miss Elting, teacher of science at Mount Vernon Seminary, said: "There are 125 Vassar graduates enrolled in our local group, and others here not enrolled. Most of them work with the Government, and all of them are intensely interested in promoting a high standard of public school education, and in providing Vassar scholarships for worth-while girls."

Speaking for the Smith College group, Mrs. Dorothy Guider told of its organization of a junior group, composed of alumnae graduated since 1924, to do volunteer social service and girl scouts' work.

"In the old days, a Smith College girl left school and got a job right away, if she wanted one—whether or not she really needed it," Mrs. Guider said. "But it's different today. And we planned this junior group for the benefit of the girl with time on her hands, and no other means of using it constructively."

Serving with Miss Crook, Miss Elting and Mrs. Guider on the entertainment committee planning for next Monday's meeting are Mrs. G. F. Roberts, Wellesley graduate; Miss Helen DeMond, Mount Holyoke graduate; Miss Fredericka Rainey, Radcliffe alumna, and Miss Olivia Stokes, Bryn Mawr graduate.

Bright Future For Methodism In Reich Seen

Free Churches Not Under Supervision of State, Miss Achard Says.

METHODIST churches in Germany are carrying on their work today as they did before the Nazi regime, but with one exception—the young people's group is no longer called the Epworth League, but a unit of the Hitler Youth.

"The Methodist Church is one of the free churches in Germany," Miss Amalie Achard, German secretary of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, explained. Miss Achard is in Washington attending the sixty-fourth annual session of the executive committee of the society.

"The free churches, which include the Baptist, the Evangelical Association, and several other Protestant churches, are not under the direction of Bishop Mueller, who is head of the new State Church."

Young people in Germany are sincerely interested in the church, and spend much of their time and energy in church work, according to Miss Achard.

Center of Social Life.

"In this country," she said, "young people go to church because it is the thing to do. But over there the church is the center of the social life. And while the young people do not have as much leisure time as they do in this country they spend much of it working for the church.

"For instance, the older members of the Hitler Youth spend two days out of every week collecting things for the poor, then the younger members distribute them.

"We also have social affairs for the young people in the church," she said. "They have vacation camps, go on hikes, engage in sports and have other healthful activities."

Today there are approximately 50,000 Methodists in Germany and Switzerland, according to Miss Achard. The church was first established in that country in 1848, and Miss Achard's grandfather did the first work there. She was born in Germany, and educated in Switzerland. All her life she has been working for the Methodist Church.

Active in Missions.

Methodist churches in Germany are active in missionary work, Miss Achard said.

"They are affiliated with the International Missionary of the Church and send missionaries to 21 foreign countries," she added.

"We feel that there is a definite place in the new Germany for the Methodist Church, and the future in that country is bright."

Giant Cruisers Being Designed Says Sikorsky

Great Craft Will Carry 55 Passengers and 1,000 Pounds of Mail.

Giant air cruisers, each capable of carrying 55 passengers and 1,000 pounds of mail and express, are being designed for trans-oceanic service, Igor Sikorsky, aircraft manufacturer, told the Federal Aviation Commission yesterday.

The same planes, converted into military bombing types and carrying 20,000 pounds of bombs each, could reduce a city like New York to a shambles while operating from aircraft carriers a thousand miles at sea, he said.

Frank Hawks, celebrated pilot, told the commission that with present available equipment a fleet of enmy plans could fly from Alaska to New York, nonstop, and drop a ton of bombs or a huge quantity of poison gas. The plans would be unabl to mak the rturn flight, he said, but ther are plenty of subjects of other countries who would willingly give their lives in such a feat.

Stressing the importance of higher speed aircraft for military use, Hawks said our air force "should have their eyes on Alaska and the Aleutian Islands, as well as Hawaii and the Philippines for the protection of not only the West Coast, but the East Coast as well."

The picture Sikorsky drew of the possibility of New York City being devastated by aerial attack was prompted by questions from Chairman Clark Howell, of the commission. Sikorsky told of plans of his company for building the great air cruisers which, he said, would weigh 116,000 pounds, have a flying range of 4,600 miles at nearly 200 miles an hour, and permit a pay load of 55,000 pounds. They would have dining and sleeping accommodations.

He said he would prefer to use flying boats of long flying ranges, rather than resort to landings on seadromes for refueling.

Little Entente Acts To End Terrorism

about its disruption will discover that the reaction to the King's assassination has been to strengthen the Little Entente and the Balkan pact states, and bring France and Great Britain to the aid of little states in distress.

"While the official communique issued after the meeting of the Entente) does not state definitely that these measures were taken, I can tell you that we discussed the terrible danger that terrorism is to internal peace and decided to appeal to all nations to suppress it."

Despite the Entente's plans to protest to Hungary, it was learned no vigorous representations will be made. Nor was any decision taken as to Italy's alleged responsibility for sheltering terrorists.

Act to Fortify Entente.

Edouard Benes, Czechoslovak foreign minister and the Little Entente's guiding spirit, spent the day conferring with Foreign Ministers Titulescu, of Rumania, and Bogoljub Yevtich, of Yugoslavia, as to ways of fortifying the Entente against the continent's critical military and political situation.

Bulgaria's inclusion in the tripower partnership Benes conceived soon after the Great War was thoroughly discussed.

It was learned here also that Yugoslavia already has approached Hungary diplomatically with these three inquiries:

When did Vladimir Georgieff, the assassin of Marseille, pass the Hungarian border?

Where and how long did he stay in Hungary?

What was the purpose of his visit?

Prospects for Bulgaria's addition to the ranks of the Little Entente were believed here to have been improved by King Alexander's visit to Sofia just before his fatal trip to France.

King Alexander did much to convince King Boris that it would be to Bulgaria's interest to throw in her fortunes with Yugoslavia, Czechoslavakia and Rumania, it was pointed out.

Bulgarian Problem Up.

A tight Balkan bloc, it is believed, would strengthen considerably Yugoslavia's and Rumania's opposition to possible restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy in Austria.

It was felt here that Bulgaria's willingness to join the entente and the Balkan pact might be conditioned on solution of the minorities problem in the Dobrudja district of Rumania.

Boris would want assurances, it was believed, that Rumania would grant real minority rights to the more than 400,000 Bulgarians living in Rumania, and indemnify them for property confiscated.

R. G. Livingston yesterday was appointed acting chairman of the District of Columbia Petroleum Board until a new chairman is appointed by Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

Jealous Woman Reveals Balkan Intriques Leading Up to Alexander's Assassination

Gustav Perchetz, or Pachetz, is shown with Yelke (Helen) Porgoreles, who named him as one of the conspirators in the plot to assassinate King Alexander of Yugoslavia. The woman now is reported to be in the United States.

port as Ilonda Pogoralitz, I could leave Hungary, and I am now free and on my way to a cousin in America. And now I am free to write of my experiences and to tear the masks from the faces of Perchetz and Pavelich, the real organizers of the killing of Tony Schlegel (a Croat journalist in Zagreb), who was assassinated by their agents; and of the killing of former Minister Neuderfer (also Croatian), and of how they bombed Yugoslavian railroads, murdering women and children."

She told how the pair deluded unemployed Croatian workmen in Belgium and France into coming to Italy and Hungary on the promise of work, and then forced them to enter terrorist "camps." Those who tried to leave, she swore, were tortured or killed. She added that Perchetz himself killed one at Yanka Pusta, for Perchetz was the "strong-arm man," the killer and trainer of killers, while Pavelich handled the negotiations and the propaganda, she charged.

This small terrorist group, she declared, did not represent the Croatians as a people, but only a small, violent minority of irreconcilables, and misled laborers.

When she first went to Vienna to live with her "betrothed," she told the court, she knew nothing of his work, but he made her his secretary by day and the companion of his night-club revelries by night, and she soon learned the true state of affairs.

Crossed Into Hungary.

She learned that in January, 1929, she had crossed from Yugoslavia into Hungary with Branco Yelitch, now said to be in the United States. Getting Hungarian passports, they went to Italy and later to Vienna, where Perchetz started negotiations with Bulgarian terrorists. Later still, Perchetz entered Bulgaria, where he formed liaison with Vancha Mihailoff, leader of the Macedonian terrorists, now reported trying to reach the United States from Turkey. Mihailoff later was expelled from Bulgaria when a coup d'etat resulted in improved relations between that country and Yugoslavia. The man who actually killed King Alexander once was Mihailoff's chauffeur.

Perchetz, with Pavelich, next appeared in Italy, where, she said, they reached an understanding with the Italian government. She was not very clear about this understanding.

Among the callers at their home in Vienna, she related were Yelitch; Alfred Neumann, Austrian colonel; Lazlo Benes, of an American press agency; Giorgio Sanza, Italian journalist; Dr. Eugenio Moreale, press attache of the Italian embassy at Vienna. The latter, she said, with Perchetz and Pavelich, prepared propaganda for Italian newspapers.

Tells of Buying Farm.

When terrorist activities were begun, she testified, "they bought a little farm at Klingenbach, where they made infernal machines. One of the leading figures there, she said, was a Yugoslavian named Kremzir. There they started the Yugoslavian railway bombings, to freighten tourists and create fear and distrust of the state.

"When a professor's whole family was killed in a bombing, I could stand it no longer. I went to Sofia and became a cabaret dancer. My only consolation were letters from Perchetz, in whose love I still believed."

She declared he went at that time to Budapest to contact Hungarian officials, and they sent him to the general staff, with whom he planned to buy a farm which would be useful as a point from which spies could be sent, as well as propaganda.

"Perchetz bought Yanka Pusta, only 4 or 5 miles beyond the Yugoslav border," Yelke went on.

There terrorist work continued, she said, and men were trained as murderers. But she returned to him at Budapest, where his work again horrified her. He took up military spying, Yelke charged, sending reports to two Hungarian officers. He often changed names and addresses, she said, and finally was issued a passport as Croom Illes, journalist. She was given one as Ilonda Pogoralitz, native of Budapest. On advice of Hungarian officials, she swore, they lived apart. At that time, she testified, the chauffeur Pospishil, arrested in France as a conspirator in Alexander's death recently, was Perchetz's bodyguard.

Reveals Slaying in Camp.

Terrorism continued. Perchetz killed one man personally at Yanka Pusta for defection. They all had uniforms of the Ustashi, notorious terrorist group. Then the end, for her:

"Our relations began to cool. He spoke to me more as a servant than as a bride. I saw that I was losing my last hope, and was terribly jealous. I followed him. I found he was going to another woman. I followed her to the door of his home. Later, to my bitter astonishment, I found that many others went there.

"I lost all hope that he would marry me and I asked him for a little money in order to start life anew in another country. He said I could have enough to live on, but could not leave. Then I asked for a final interview. Several days later he came and I told him I knew how he had deceived me. I cried. I realized I had lost him completely.

"I told him I would leave, whether or not he gave me the money. Suddenly he changed his cold attitude and begged me to stay. He said he'd marry me. But I couldn't believe. My decision was made. I knew he changed only through fear, and I resolved to be revenged.

Finally Flees Country.

"He seized my purse and searched it for my passport. When he failed to find it, he searched my apartment. Again failing, he threatened that I would be killed if I fled.

"It was only with the greatest difficulty that I left the country."

Then, she said, she went to Yugoslavia, told her story to a newspaper in Zagreb, which published it, and later to the police.

The result was a death sentence for both exiles. And now Pavelich must face new charges, outside his own country, for the assassination of Alexander. Yugoslavia, it is reported, will ask his extradition.

Giant Serpent's 'Corpse' Appears; Proves Wooden

Ludington, Mich., Oct. 19 (AP).—Remember the big, bad sea serpent that struck some terror and more wonderment to the hearts of swimmers and boaters on Lake Michigan last summer?

Well, he was just a wooden reproduction of some one's idea of what a sea serpent should look like, and L. A. Cannater, keeper of the big Sable Light House 10 miles north of here, has the evidence to prove it.

Police Exhaust Clews in Death Of Farmer, 68

Montgomery County (Md.) police last night were without new leads in the slaying of William Hill, retired Potomac (Md.) farmer, whose body was found Thursday in the basement of the Potomac School. An autopsy showed his head had been crushed by a heavy instrument.

Police yesterday searched for an iron furnace shaker, which has been missing from the school, at the door of which Hill's body was found, and the basement and school building. Neither search revealed anything new, police said.

Two men who were last seen with Hill Wednesday night were released yesterday and absolved of connection with the crime. Their stories have been corroborated by other witnesses.

Police believe the 68-year-old retired farmer was taken to the school, robbed of $12 he was known to have had and then murdered with the furnace shaker.

Requiem mass for Hill will be said today at 9:30 a. m. at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, near Rockville. The body was removed to the home of a son, John W. Hill, yesterday.

Hormone Drops End 50 Pct. Of 100 Couples' Childlessness

Extract Is Given Daily in Tests Conducted by Bostonian.

Boston, Oct. 19 (AP).—The cure of 50 per cent of childlessness among 100 married couples by the easy method of taking daily a few drops of hormone extracts, was reported to the American College of Surgeons here today.

The infertility was not confined to one sex. Responsibility was quite evenly divided. The results were reported by Dr. Allan Winter Rowe, director of research of the Evans Memorial Hospital, Boston.

The extracts were of the pituitary gland, the thyroid and ovary. The pituitary lies near the base of the brain and governs the cooperation of the series of ductless glands which include not only those of sex, but the adrenals, thyroids and parathyroids, or glands which have no apparent direct relation to either sex or fertility.

In some instances the infertility appeared caused by lowered vitality affecting the body generally. This was especially true of those who were infertile because of thyroid-gland deficiency.

The lack of sufficient thyroid activity reduced the entire bodily energy and had no direct effect on sex. Yet when thyroid extract brought up the general health level the infertility disappeared.

A new diagnosis for meningitis, which catches the disease earlier than heretofore by one to five days and saves lives, was reported by Dr. Samuel J. Kopetzky, of New York City. It was developed in Beth Israel Hospital, New York, this year.

TVA Utility Purchase Deliberated by Board

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 19 (U.P.).—The State railroad and utilities commission tonight took under advisement a petition for sale of Tennessee Public Service Co. properties valued at more than $6,000,000 to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The proposed deal includes the company's electrical distribution system in Knoxville, which the City of Knoxville would operate as a municipal plant to provide an outlet for TVA power at low "yardstick" rates.

Madrid, Oct. 19 (AP).—Minister of War Diego Hidalgo today announced the army had occupied the last rebel strongholds in Asturias, ending Spain's bloody extremist revolution which lasted 15 days and caused tremendous loss of life and property. The towns of Mieres, Ujo, Sama and Langreo surrendered today.

Corby Cleared In Auto Crash

Held Not Responsible for Injuries to Passenger in Daughter's Car.

A jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday decided William S. Corby, prominent in business and social circles, was not to be held accountable for the injuries William F. Thyson, jr., sustained when an automobile operated by Corby's daughter, Miss Murial Eleanor Corby, skidded off the road and overturned.

Thyson was thrown from the machine. He suffered a fractured skull and other injuries. He contended the father was responsible for the allegedly reckless driving of his daughter on the grounds that the daughter was the agent of her father or that she was operating a "family car," which made the head of the family responsible for her actions.

Attorneys Norman B. Frost and Frank Myers contended Mr. Corby had purchased the car and had given it to his daughter for her exclusive use. Under their theory she was "her own boss" insofar as the car was concerned.

Thyson was hurt two years ago when Miss Corby's car skidded off the road at Tyson's Corner, Va., and overturned.

State Senator Expected to Announce Decision on Job Today.

By a Staff Correspondent.

La Plata, Md., Oct. 19.—After an informal meeting of Charles County Republican leaders here today, it was reported the party would offer no opposition if State Senator Walter J. Mitchell, Democrat, accepts the nomination for chief judge of the Seventh Judicial Circuit.

The leaders spoke only for Charles County, though Calvert and St. Marys counties are expected to fall in line.

What Prince Georges County, or the Republican State Central Committee of Maryland, which is expected to have the final say so, will do is yet a matter of conjecture.

Meanwhile, Senator Mitchell, a cousin of the late Chief Judge J. Mitchell Digges, whose place Gov. Ritchie has asked him to fill, was noncommittal on his next step.

It was announced at his office today that Mr. Mitchell probably would make known his intentions tomorrow. If he accepts he will hold the judgeship, under the temporary appointment, until January.

Nominations will be made immediately for the November elections. If Mr. Mitchell accepts the temporary appointment it is expected the Democratic machine will place his name on the November ballot.

Some question has been raised as to whether the State central committees of the entire State should make the nominations, or whether it should be done by the State central committees of the four counties involved.

There also has been some mention by members of the local bars of elevating one of the two associate judges now on the bench in the Seventh Judicial District to the office of chief judge.

Gov. Ritchie, after attending the funeral of Judge Digges here yesterday, wired Senator Mitchell offering him the temporary appointment. His simultaneous announcement was as follows:

"From many years of intimate acquaintance with Senator Mitchell of a personal, public and professional character, I consider that, in integrity, experience and ability, he merits this honor and I hope he accepts."

Windsor Palmer, 22, of Leonardtown, Md., believes he is too young to serve in the Maryland Legislature, so he has withdrawn his candidacy in St. Marys County. Mr. Palmer was running on the Republican ticket. He plans, for the present, to serve his party at home, according to his friends.

The automobile of Eugene White, of Fredericksburg, Va., was stolen this week, but he didn't know it until police brought the car back to him. White is said to have parked the machine and forgot about it until State Policeman Sam Redding came around to say that "Here is your car and we have the thief in jail."

Religion still has its place in the daily life of the Baltimore school child, Dr. David E. Weglein, superintendent of schools, announces.

Answering the statement of the Rev. Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving before the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church that "religion has been driven out of public schools," Dr. Weglein declares that Baltimore school children begin each school day with recitation of the Lord's Prayer and with the reading of verses from the Bible. The superintendent also said this has been a custom in the schools so long that he can not remember when it was not done.

Virginians have learned that the sting of a yellow jacket can be fatal. The Virginia Bureau of Vital Statistics has reported that there has been filed a death certificate to the effect that James Branham, 7, of Amherst, died on September 25 from the effects of a yellow jacket's sting.

Dr. M. A. Plecker, registrar of the bureau, expressed the opinion that the yellow jacket had touched some septic material before stinging the lad and the germ was deposited along with the sting.

Historic Williamsburg Ready for Visit of President Today

William and Mary players will present "The Ghosts of Windsor Park" as part of the dedication of Matoaka Park, adjoining the college campus. Left, a group of the players in colonial costume going through an historic portion of the play. As part of the restoration work at Williamsburg, the old capitol has been restored. It stands at the eastern end of Duke of Gloucester street, principal thoroughfare of the town. Quaint homes, restored to their original seventeenth century setting, dot Williamsburg, designed to become the "Colonial Capital" of a modern America.

W. & M. Is Set For Roosevelt Visit Today

Colorful Welcome Ready for President at Williamsburg.

Ceremonies Will Mark Bryan's Inauguration as School Head.

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—Virginia's ancient capital will celebrate President's Day tomorrow when President Franklin D. Roosevelt will witness the inauguration of John Stewart Bryan as president of the Nation's second oldest institution of higher learning—the College of William and Mary.

President Bryan in turn will confer upon the Nation's President William and Mary's honorary degree of doctor of laws. The same honor will be conferred upon Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia.

A welcome reminiscent of the days when Williamsburg was the capital of Virginia, and a colonial metropolis of America, has been prepared.

President Roosevelt and Mr. Bryan and their party, accompanied by an academic procession, will traverse historic Duke of Gloucester street, rededicating it as the last major restoration project of Colonial Williamsburg which has been reconstructed by John D. Rockefeller, jr., so that it has the appearance of the city that was the hub of the Nation in the eighteenth century.

The inauguration ceremonies for Mr Bryan and those honoring President Roosevelt and Gov. Peery will take place on the steps of the west portico of the old Wren Building. This old building, restored to the antiquity of the college founded under a royal charter in 1693, is the oldest academic building in the country. It is the center of a college which is second in age only to Harvard, President Roosevelt's alma mater.

President Roosevelt will bring the simple ceremony to its climax with the first Presidential speech in Williamsburg since President Coolidge opened the sesquicentennial anniversary celebration of the signing of the Virginia resolutions.

G. O. P. Denies Pro-New Deal View in State

Platform Misquoted, Says Maryland Committee Statement.

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Maryland Republican State central committee today isued a positive denial that the party's State platform "advocates or approves the New Deal."

"The platform," said the statement, "has been misquoted as advocating the New Deal. The opposite of this statement is true.

"Maryland Republicans do not advocate or approve the New Deal. All that Mr. Nice (Harry W. Nice, gubernatorial nominee) and his associates advocate is that we refrain from opposing any plans of the Government to bring about relief. Mr. Nice and his associates will cooperate in any movement to alleviate the misery of the people.

"At no time has Mr. Nice, nor his associates, approved the theories of the National Administration which are proving, as we suspected, to be without merit."

The Republican statement was issued after a Literary Digest poll was made public indicating sentiment in Maryland was swinging against New Deal policies. Referring to the results of the poll, the statement said:

"This confirms the evidence which we here in Maryland have been gathering for some time and constitutes one of the principal reasons for the revolt against the Ritchie administration, which we believe is imminent and which will be brought to fruition on November 6."

The Democratic State platform, presented to the convention by Gov. Ritchie, Nice's opponent in the November 6 election, lauded President Roosevelt's efforts to bring the country out of its economic stress and pledged full support.

Dogs to Have Their Day Again

Fredericksburg Revives Annual Mart, Inaugurated 200 Years Ago, for Display and Barter of Canine Aristocrats Along With Common Mutts.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 19 (Spl.).—That proverbial day to which every dog is said to be entitled will dawn here November 10, when the dog mart—the annual display and barter of dogs, originated more than 200 years ago—is revived under the auspices of the chamber of commerce.

Dogs from Fredericksburg and surrounding counties may have been in comparative obscurity throughout the current canine generation, but when the time-hallowed dog mart is held the dog will be undisputed king for a day. Representatives of dogdom's every social stratum—from the country gentleman's pedigreed pointer to the street urchin's champion flea-fighter—will be side by side.

The dog mart originated in the early colonial days when dog owners met once each year to trade hunting dogs for breeding purposes. The practice expanded until exhibition and sale of the animals was also conducted. The event was revived on a small scale here six years ago, but was not held during 1933.

Final plans on the day's program for this year's event have not been worked out. Private sale of the animals will take place early in the afternoon and will be followed by auction sales. The balance of the day will be devoted to swapping and selling dogs and displaying prize animals.

L. W. McWane heads the committee in charge of the mart. Assisting him will be Edwin A. Gibson, Leo V. Timberlake, C. M. Cowan, R. G. Hilldrup, Walter Carmichael, Arthur Taliaferro, Graham D. Richardson, of Quantico, and Lloyd E. Stevens, of Quantico.

Noted Artists Contribute to Gala Occasion

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SIX DAY BIKE RIDER." First National picturization of a story by Earl Baldwin, starring Joe E. Brown, with Maxine Doyle, Dorothy Christy, Gordon Westcott, Frank McHugh, Arthur Aylesworth and William Grainger. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Previewed Tuesday, October 16.

To everyone who has had a hand in concocting the practically epochal stage bill celebrating the fourth anniversary of vaudeville at the Earle Theater this week, congratulations are due.

Here is an entertainment that would be worth $2.20 of any man's money in any theater as a straight variety frolic—which is what it frankly declares itself to be. There are around 21 items on the bill, personalities galore and not a slow moment.

Color, flash, movement, comedy, dance and tunefulness contribute to a program that has been worked over through the hours of the last several night by some of the most astute showmen in America to make sure that it would not lack any of the qualities of superlative pastiming. The task has been performed with complete and overwhelming success.

There is no profit to be derived from a futile effort to cite every inspiriting number on the stage and personally commend those who contrive them in one way or another. There may be some profit, however, in including everybody concerned in one blanket declaration that they have contributed individually and collectively to the perfection of a great show.

Three Stars Dominate.

There certainly can not be anything amiss with a plain statement that three stars dominate the bill. They are Guy Kibbee, admirable trouper whose achievements encompass fine performances on both stage and screen; Maxine Doyle, who has taken on an artistic stature during her year of absence from Washington that seems almost unbelievable, and Paul Ash, famous Chicago master of ceremonies and one of the most notable figures of the picturesque and pioneering era of the silent cinema.

By virtue of her wide acquaintanceship in the Capital and the long tour of duty she put in at the Earle, Maxine is entitled to first consideration. Here, then, is a youngster who has come along in her singing, her dancing and her savoir faire in the theater until she now is an artiste of the first rank, whose songs and tap routines are entitled to take rank with those of her contemporaries who have, perhaps, preceded her to National fame.

Her "The Object of My Affections" is a number that won her an ovation yesterday afternoon and again last night, when I watched the show from backstage, and her tap dance is an impressive demonstration of the trickiness of modern rhythms. Incidentally, those handspring dinguses she does are not cartwheels, but tinsikas—muscularly intricate adaptations of a species of Arabian acrobatics that involve kinks, twists and what nots.

Guy Kibbee is a seasoned player whose comicalities "get over" like a flash with his audiences. He pretends not to want to talk about Hollywood, so does so with fine effect, with Paul Ash as his "stooge"—and I hope Mr. Ash will forgive me for that one. For Paul Ash is a personality that the theater can not well do without. He runs the show with clock-like precision and a genial spirit of fun that adds a good 50 per cent to its effectiveness.

Those Who Contribute.

Now, in case you would care to know who are on this colossal bill, they are the Sara Mildred Strauss Dancers, Tom Gentry and his stage band, which augments Freddie Clark's pit orchestra; Lou Barrison, who sings well when not pianoing with the Gentry Group; George Freems, stilt dancer; Duffin and Draper, two of the most remarkable dancers you will see; Ginger Pearson, a "torch" singer and impersonator who has lots of fun with Lou Holtz, Mae West and ZaSu Pitts; Audrey Sieber, mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, who does a tap dance that will be a revelation; Henry Starr, full-blooded American Indian pianist and singer of the first grade; the Four Rockets, feminine dancers who have what it takes, and the combined contributions of the pit and stage orchestras in various concerted numbers, including a staggering arrangement of a considerable list of songs made famous by Bing Crosby.

The dancers, Mr. Ash and the Strauss ensemble amble in and out of the proceedings in most disarming fashion.

All in all, John J. Payette, Guy Wonders, Freddie Clark, Paul Ash and all the rest have done themselves, the Earle Theater and Washington proud in this observance of an anniversary that woud be otherwise unimportant.

There Is a Picture.

On the screen, Joe E. Brown, Maxine Doyle, Gordon Westcott, Frank McHugh and numerous others have a great deal of fun in grinding out the hectic experiences of "Six Day Bike Rider," a screen play that indulges in many sprints, some of which fail to ring up record times on the stopwatches. The whole business, nevertheless, adds up to an amusing field day for Joe E. Brown, with just enough romantic interest to prove that Maxine Doyle is going places on the celluloid ribbons.

The "Birthday Cake" overture, conducted by Freddie Clark, sung in its vocal passages by Bert Granoff and played at the console of the pipe organ by Neil Paxton; the Universal News, with Graham McNamee, and a few other ornate trimmings render Miss Doyle's return to the scene of her first emidence enlivening, interesting and artistically important.

Play Leads in Classic Tragedy

Bess Jones Winburn, who assumes the role of Juliet, and Howard Whitfield, Romeo, as they appear in the Community Players' production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," which was presented last night and will be repeated tonight in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, under the auspices of the Community Center Department. The performance begins at 8 p. m., and the location is Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest.

Loew's Fox

"HAVE A HEART." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by David Butler and Buddy G. De Sylva, starring James Dunn and Jean Parker, with Una Merkel, Stuart Erwin, Willard Robertson and Muriel Evans. Directed by David Butler. Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Harraman Mangum.

A notable stage show at Loew's Fox Theater this week presents the ever-popular Amos 'n' Andy as headliners and a supplementary bill that is exceptionally well balanced and entertaining.

Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll, accompanied by their famous announcer, Bill Hay (who received almost as much applause as the boys themselves), prove that their popularity has survived many years of broadcasting, a summer's absence from the air, a not-so-successful motion picture and a sameness of material that would have driven many a less volatile team into the blankness of oblivion long before this.

But at yesterday's opening performance Amos 'n' Andy and the contributory Henry Van Porter, Brother Crawford, King Fish, Lightnin' and Prince Ali Bendo proved their right to the place they hold in the hearts of radio-listening America. The boys enjoy the fact that you like them. Their whole manner indicates that they like you in return—and a pleasant feeling is established by this entente cordiale.

Others Who Score.

Alexander and Santos present a Ballet Comique that combines an astonishing and classic grace with a hodge-podge of burlesque and slapstick antics to produce a delightfully unusual and cleverly balanced act. Stone and Lee are nonsensically entertaining and the Stewart Sisters (surely you remember Bubbles Stewart, who gives that rip-snorting imitation of Joe Penner that out-Penners Penner!), have joined forces with an exuberant young man named Chester Fredericks and the result is youthfully effervescent.

Not the least enjoyable portion of the bill is Phil Lampkin's overture, which incorporates a tuneful and rhythmic dignity worthy of special mention and heard too seldom in our local cinema musical prologues. This particular interlude happens to be a well-chosen selection of Shubert's most famous works, including the "Unfinished Symphony."

There Is a Picture.

"Have a Heart," the screen feature for this week, is a frothily pleasant bit filled with the lightest sort of hokum and familiar tearjerking. The comedy honors are carried off by Una Merkel, that delicious blonde Southerner, and Stuart Erwin, another veteran laugh-provoker. Jean Parker and James Dunn furnish the heart interest.

It is all about Sally Moore (Jean Parker), who has dancing feet, a sunny disposition and a sublime bravery. All of these are, of course, prime requisites for the Janet-Gaynor-type heroine, and such a type little Miss Parker will henceforward be labeled, we fear.

Sally is engaged to marry Joe, but on the eve of her wedding is hopelessly crippled. Feeling that Joe is reluctant to marry a cripple, Sally offers him his freedom and he accepts it readily enough. Then into Sally's life comes Jimmy (James Dunn), and after a few trials and tribulations, a laugh or two and a mild tear or so, there is a tight clinch for a fade-out, and everyone is dismissed into the vague atmosphere of the proverbial "happy ending."

Columbia

"THE BARRETTS OF WIMPOLE STREET." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Rudolf Besier, starring Norma Shearer, Fredric March and Charles Laughton, with Maureen O'Sullivan, Una O'Conner, Ralph Forbes, Katherine Alexander and "Flush." Directed by Sidney Franklin. Reviewed (return engagement, second week) by W. A. Whitney.

For the first time under the present operating policy of Loew's Columbia Theater, a picture playing a return engagement has gone into a second week. Particularly noteworthy, too, is the fact that this remarkable production had previously played two full weeks at Loew's Palace Theater.

Notwithstanding, however, the facts of this remarkable record, the city of Washington, in order to maintain its title of having the country's most discriminating cinema audience, could scarcely have done less for such a star-studded hit as "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

In spite of a powerful study of domesticity, not untinged by baser motives, the narrative pales somewhat before the talents that are brought to its interpretation.

Norma Shearer, as Elizabeth; Fredric March, as the poet, and Charles Laughton, as the elder Barrett, are quite beyond the need of any more superlatives at this time.

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street" should be on every one's "must list!"

The auxiliary attractions include "Viva Willie," a Willie Whopper cartoon; "Taking Care of Baby," an M-G-M Oddity, with Pete Smith cracking wise on infant care, and a news release.

Metropolitan

"ONE NIGHT OF LOVE." Columbia picturization of a story by Dorothy Speare and Charles Beahan, starring Grace Moore, with Tullio Carminati, Lyle Talbot, Mona Barrie and Louis Albern. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Translation of an entire grand opera into terms of cinema is, it is said, economically impossible, because the public will not pay the freight. Yet, since that eventful night nearly eight years ago when Giovanni Martinelli first sang "Vesti la Giubba" before the awe-struck audience gazing upon talking pictures, selections from the operas have not been uncommon short subjects.

So, when such selections as "Ah, Fors' e Lui" (The One of Whom I Dreamed), from Verdi's "La Traviata;" "Chi Mi Frena" (the famed sextette from Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor); "The Last Rose of Summer," from Flowtow's "Martha;" the Habanera ("Love is Like a Wood-Bird") from Bizet's "Carmen" and "Ancora un Passo," Cho-Cho-San's entrance aria, and "Un Bel di Vedremo" (Some Day He'll Come) from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly"—when such selections as these are used to embellish a story of a noble struggle to fame, there hardly seems any doubt as to the success of the venture.

And that is what Columbia has done in "One Night of Love:" these immortal arias are the diamonds studding a golden story of dramatic endeavor. As if it were not enough to make an extraordinary feature out of these "short subjects," there is added the voice and personality of Grace Moore.

Proving conclusively that a prima dinna can be a superb actress, as well as a soprano of the first rank, Miss Moore gives a performance that is quite without parallel in the annals of the motion picture.

Though much might be said of "One Night of Love"—and much already has been said—the picture is one to be seen and heard rather than read about.

As the interlude between feature screenings, the Metropolitan offers Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford in a series of organ solos and duets, a cartoon, and the combined releases of Paramount and Universal news reels.

Candidate Raps Money Policy Of Roosevelt

John Green Declares President Changed 1932 Views.

In a campaign address at Fairfax, Va., last night, John Locke Green, of Clarendon, Va., Republican candidate for the House of Representatives from the Eighth Virginia District, declared that President Roosevelt pledged a sound money policy during the 1932 campaign and "poked fun at Mr. Hoover when it was said that we would get off the gold standard if Mr. Roosevelt was elected."

His statement was part of an address which dealt, in the main, with argument to show that President Roosevelt had not lived up to the Democratic platform of 1932 which the latter had acepted "100 per cent." A large number of voters from Fairfax and adjacent sections heard Mr. Green's speech.

Among the statements of Roosevelt during the 1932 campaign which Mr. Green emphasized were: "Let us have courage to stop borrowing to meet continued deficits; stop deficits; revenues must cover expenditures by one means or another; now the credit of the family depends chiefly on whether that family is living within its income, and this is so of the Nation."

But, Green declared, a different picture exists now than that promised by Roosevelt during his campaign. "The budget is out of balance; the Government has spent billions by increasing its bonded debt, and Congress appropriated in an aggregate over $31,000,000,000," the speaker declared, adding that "all of this, as you can see, is the exact reverse from the party platform and what Mr. Roosevelt said he was going to do."

Concluding, Mr. Green declared that Mr. Roosevelt was either right in 1932, or wrong now, or wrong then and right now, adding that "turn back some pages of history and you will agree Mr. Roosevelt was right in 1932."

Stoll Kidnaper Is Heading West

route from Nashville to assist in the endeavor to set her free. Grand jury analysis of her connection with the case begoins tomorrow.

At Nashville Thomas Henry Robinson, sr., free under $25,000 bond on the accusation that he too, took part in the crime sat on his porch to say "unless the public has had experience in spending large sums of money on a wayward son, it might not be able to appreciate the feelings of a broken-hearted father.

Determination not to go through with the Stoll abduction was advanced by Mrs. Robinson, jr., today as the reason why she was carrying a knife when arrested, according to Clem W. Huggins, defense counsel. He conferred with Mrs. Robinson at Jefferson County Jail.

The knife was found when she was confined to the jail. It has been described as a kitchen knife with a 3-inch blade.

Predicts Indictment.

"Oh I guess she'll be indicted," Higgins said. "The district attorney (Thomas J. Sparks) will draw an indictment; summon a couple of witnesses and the jury will indict whomever he says."

Huggins said Mrs. Robinson had asserted she found the knife in the Indianapolis apartment where Alice Speed Stoll—Louisville social leader—was held captive for six days.

And when her husband suggested she accompany him on his flight she grabbed it so as to be able to resist any force he might use.

Huggins said the effort to clear Mrs. Robinson would embrace the admission that, although the three Robinsons may have committed acts "technically illegal," these were performed at the suggestion of Federal and State authorities and in an attempt to work for "public interest."

Pastel Shade Achieved By Mixing With White

Pastel shades for painted walls are obtained by mixing a small amount of the basic color—red, yellow or blue—with white, only a little at a time. This should be thoroughly stirred. If colors purchased already mixed are not quite satisfactory, they may be either lightened by the addition of white or deepened by putting in more color.

Silvery Gray Walls Make Pretty Bathroom

An alternate color scheme would be oyster white, chartreuse and delft blue.

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

HOLDING that the theory of wages based on costs of living, as practiced by the Government, is unsound, John P. Frey, member of the American Federation of Labor executive council, yesterday launched an attack for higher salaries.

BAKER.

"The cause of this depression was due more to the unsound basis of wages carried into effect under the direction of our great financiers, by our large corporations and by similar employers, than anything else," he said.

He said the value of manufactured products in America rose from $60,000,000,000 to $70,000,000,000 between 1923 and 1929, but that the total of wages paid in the manufacturing industries rose only $511,000,000, while the value of products rose by $10,000,000,000. Statistics of National income, the labor leader further pointed out, show that the total of wages paid to all workers was $649,000,000 less in 1929 than in 1928.

He predicted suicide for our industries, agriculture and the welfare of America in tolerating the thought that wages are to be based on the cost of living.

"Our collapse," Mr. Frey added, "has been due to employers so shortsighted that they have failed to realize that the home market of ours was the only one in which they could hope to sell their products and therefore it was essential to them that wages should be paid to this degree that there would be a market."

MAJ. EDWARD A. GOLDMAN.

THE Treasury Department's ruling, exempting credit union checks in Washington from taxation, will increase dividends of the larger unions as much as 10 per cent, is the opinion of Edgar Graham, Treasury, president of the Cooperative Credit League.

Mr. Graham also envisaged considerable savings to the smaller credit unions in the District, where there are now 24, many of which are sponsored by the District Federation of Federal Employes Unions, NFFE.

Maj. Goldman to Speak.

Maj. Edward A. Goldman, senior biologist of the Bureau of Biological Survey, will present a memoir on "Edward William Nelson, naturalist, 1855-1934," at the first meeting of the season of the Biological Society of Washington at the Cosmos Club, at 8 o'clock tonight. The public is invited.

Dr. Nelson, one of the foremost all-around naturalists of his time and the author of many well-known biological works, such at the National Geographic Society's "Wild Animals of North America," died last May at the age of 79.

He was formerly chief of the Biological Survey and was probably more closely associated with Maj. Goldman than with any other of his associates. Together they made many trips through various parts of America and through most of Mexico collecting specimens of the native fauna and flora.

At the same meeting Ben Thompson will give an illustrated talk on "Conservation Activities of the National Parks," which will be an account of what the National Park Service is doing to conserve natural history resources.

Increased membership of 120 per cent is reported by District Building Lodge, No. 87, American Federation of Government Employes. The Emergency Relief Lodge, No. 86, reports 52 new members. The latest unit on the AFGE rolls is Lodge No. 146, of Chicago, which has just received its charter.

This traffic problem has me wild; my legs grow weak from dodging cars. Pedestrian security will ne'er be found this side of Mars. This morning I met Waterloo. I contacted a load of beer. Now in the hospital I lie with a fractured leg and severed ear. One comfort filters through the gloom, as here I lie one solid ache. After a few more years of this, there will be nothing left to break.

Fervor Spreads, 1,500,000 Fans to See Nation's Gridiron Battles

With Shirley Povich

WITHOUT malice aforethought and with full knowledge that what deponent saith may be used against him this evening, this department again is rushing in where angels fear to tread and picking the football teams to behave today as follows:

Georgetown-William and Mary—Beware of those little back-field men from Williamsburg who perform as if they were teethed on footballs. But on the form that Georgetown displayed against Manhattan and in the knowledge that Joe Saverine and Charley Parcells will be present again this afternoon, one timid vote for Georgetown.

Maryland-V. P. I.—Norfolk will be sitting in on Virginia's best game of the day. The Terrapins will have plenty of ground to make up when big Foots Dickerson starts booting the ball for Poly. But on the supposition that Coach Jack Faber will order Maryland to unsheath its passing attack before it is too late, as happened at Navy, one forthright ballot for Maryland.

Catholic U.-Baltimore—Baltimore's chief consolation will be that it didn't have to come far for its beating. The Cardinals outclass Baltimore on paper and on turf. They need only one touchdown to win this one, but Coach Bergman's lads figure to go on the goal-standard in a large way this afternoon.

Navy-Columbia—Lieut. Tommy Hamilton is throwing his lads to the Lions today, and the Lions know what to do. With Buzz Borries a sick man, Navy's ammunition is running short. Navy will have its eyes on Al Barabas and Columbia will be focusing its attention on the Rose Bowl bid again. This is no time to desert Lou Little, so one resolute vote for Columbia.

Pitt-Minnesota—After this one, the National champion may be easy to name. Minnesota is supposed to have the best in the Midwest, Pitt the best in the East. That game with Southern California last week was none too easy on the Panthers. And, remembering Coach Bernie Bierman's great teams at Tulane, this department is constrained to go f'r the Gophers today.

St. Mary's-Fordham—The Galloping Gaels meet the Mauling Maroons and the Notre Dame system is a sure winner with Slip Madigan and Jim Crowley doing the coaching. But that Nevada team that California walloped 45 to 0 was able to hang it on the Gaels last week. That ought to make the choice of Fordham easy. But it doesn't. Thus, one vote of dubious certainty for Fordham.

Princeton-Washington and Lee—The Tigers are willing to win this one by any kind of a score. Those Generals will be presenting a Tiffany line and a Woolworth back field at Princeton. They don't figure to score, but neither do the Tigers figure to run wild against that line. Any margin will be acceptable to Princeton, and, on the theory that the Tigers will score a couple of touchdowns, one solid vote for the Orange and the Black.

Dartmouth-Virginia—Dartmouth's football fortunes are still in a slump, but so are Virginia's. The Big Green, though, can't be as bad as the Cavaliers, who don't know where their next first down is coming from. This one is a pipe. Dartmouth all the way.

Army-Sewanee—It will be a nice trip for the Southerners. The Cadets will show them the ground and the points of interest, and then show them how football is really played. If Army loses this one, they ought to scrap the National defense and start all over again.

Boston College-Western Maryland—Minute for minutes, it figures to be one of the best games of the day. Bill Shepard will win it or lose it for Western Maryland, depending on his mates' ability to shake him loose. You really pays your money and takes your choice on this one; but, Shepard or no Shepard, one prayerful vote for Boston College.

Harvard-Holy Cross—The Crimson vs. the Crusaders. Harvard football is looking up and they need this game to entice the Boston patronage. Here's one I'd like to duck; but, on the theory that Holy Cross' 17-6 defeat of Catholic U. was tinged with good luck, one more or less determined ballot for Harvard.

Yale-Brown—Yale has reinstalled the alumni system of coaching and was extremely fortunate to beat a Penn team that the week before had been bowled over by Ursinus. On the same day, a losing Brown team was outplaying Harvard except for fumbles. That makes the choice easier. Brown it is.

Michigan-Georgia Tech—The Rambling Wrecks from Georgia ain't what they used to be, and neither is Michigan for that matter. That 20-0 defeat of Tech by Duke last week was no disgrace, not with Duke probably the best team in the country. If Harry Kipke gets some of his wounded back into the Michigan line-up, he may win it, but I'm stringing with Tech.

Ohio State-Colgate—For three years now, Ohio State was supposed to be packed with power and for three years the Buckeyes have disappointed. They still have the remnants of that 1933 team, though, and Andy Kerr's Colgate team appears a wee bit outclassed.

Chicago-Indiana—The team that beat Michigan, 20 to 0, plays the team that lost to Ohio State, 33 to 0, which ought to make the selection easy—but it doesn't. Since the Ohio State debacle, Indiana held Temple to a 6-6 tie, and Pop Warner's Temple team is no push-over. But, regardless, Chicago to win.

Iowa-Iowa State—Here we might have the Big Ten champion in the making. I mean Iowa. That 14-13 loss to Nebraska can't cloud the issue. Iowa knocked over Northwestern, 20 to 7, and figures to hand State its first defeat of the season.

Wisconsin-Purdue—Purdue has little to recommend it thus far, what with defeats by Rice and Notre Dame. Wisconsin's 3-0 win over little Marquette was not so impressive either; but, on the theory that it is not a Purdue year, one apprehensive ballot for Wisconsin.

Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech—The Irish are gathering momentum after that setback by Texas and Layden is beginning to discover his best combination from among the mob of talent. Carnegie has upset the Notre Dame apple-cart before, but with no apple-cart remaining, one solid vote for the Irish.

North Carolina-Kentucky—Ole Kaintuck lost to Washington and Lee by a touchdown and could win from Clemson by only the same margin, which should give you some idea. North Carolina took Georgia by a couple of touchdowns, which contains the seed of another idea. North Carolina, then, it is.

Alabama-Tennessee—Here's a couple of teams headed for the same goal—the conference championship. Today's winner will probably make it. On the advice of Champ Pickens, incurable Alabaman, one confirmed vote for the Crimson Tide and don't blame me.

Tulane-Georgia—The Green Wave figures to keep rolling along today. Georgia is in the throes of one of its worst seasons and is making it easy for the selectors. Tulane by puh-lenty.

Richmond-V. M. I.—The Cadets will have no more of Richmond after this year. They are getting too tough. V. M. I. has 11 good football players and no more. On the theory they'll need some substitutes today, one resolute ballot for Richmond.

Three Games Standouts On Card

Pitt-Minnesota Feature; Fordham Plays Host to St. Mary's.

Ohio State vs. Colgate; Plenty of Dynamite in Other Clashes.

MORE than 1,500,000 fans are expected to attend 218 college football games scheduled today throughout a Nation gripped by football fervor approaching that of the gridiron's golden decade.

Although the season's half-way mark has not been reached yet, today's legions of spectators should equal or surpass the totals of late-season Saturdays during the past four years, according to the United Press.

In the New York metropolitan area alone, nearly 220,000 are expected to witness four games. Similar large crowds are anticipated throughout the country for the banner slate of intersectional clashes in the East and Midwest and the important regional battles in other sectors.

Plenty of Dynamite.

Intersectional collisions, important because of their ultimate bearing on the mythical National championship, will feature hostilities although some of the regional battles pack plenty of dynamite. Three intersectional brawls stand out: The Minnesota-Pitt melee at Pittsburgh; the Ohio State-Colgate clash at Columbus, Ohio, and the St. Mary's-Fordham entanglement at New York.

Of these three, the meeting of Bernie Bierman's tearing Minnesota Gophers and Jock Sutherland's Pitt Panthers is easily the headline encounter. The Panthers seek to avenge last season's lone defeat which prevented a trip to the Rose Bowl. Moreover, each of these two outfits looms formidably among the potential champions in the East and Midwest.

Other Pairings.

Other intersectional pairings in the East bring together Army-Sewanee, Manhattan-Michigan State, Dartmouth-Virginia, Georgetown-William and Mary, and Villa Nova-Detroit. Those in the Midwest match Michigan-Georgia Tech, Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech, Marquette-Centre, and Rice-Creighton. Louisiana State and Arkansas collide in the South, while in the Southwest Southern Methodist meets Oklahoma A. and M., and Texas opposes Centenary.

Blueprints of purely regional warfare may be drawn as follows:

East—Navy invades Columbia, and Holy Cross crusades at Harvard. All four are unbeaten. Penn and Rutgers renew relations after a lapse of 43 years, and Yale plays Brown.

Midwest—Only two Big Ten games are slated: Chicago vs. Indiana, and Wisconsin vs. Purdue. Iowa and Iowa State have a traditional skirmish. In the Big Six, Kansas engages Kansas State, and Oklahoma plays Nebraska.

South—Three Southeastern Conference games pair Alabama-Tennessee, Tulane-Georgia, and Vanderbilt-Auburn. In the Southern Conference, Virginia Poly. tackles Maryland. Other pairings are: North Carolina-Kentucky, Duke-Davidson, and Florida-North Carolina State.

Pacific Coast—In the only two conference games, California meets U. C. L. A., and Southern California opposes Oregon State. Nevada stacks up against the California Ramblers; Gonzaga plays Puget Sound, and Stanford meets San Francisco.

Rocky Mountains—Five conference pairings match: Utah-Denver, Brigham Young-Colorado, Wyoming-Utah State, Colorado Aggies-Colorado Mines, and Colorado College-Greeley Teachers. Outside the conference, Idaho meets Oregon, Arizona-Loyla, and Montana-Montana Mines.

Md. Favored Over V.P.I. Today

Norfolk Is Scene of 20th Meeting; Poly Stars Are Ailing.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 19 (Spl.).—Virginia's Tidewater section is awaiting tomorrow its first major football game of the year. A majority of local support is solid behind Maryland to defeat V. P. I. on Bain Field in the only strictly Southern Conference league game of the day.

This game will be the twentieth in a series between the Gobblers and the Old Liners, also their seventh in Norfolk. The count stands three-all tonight, but with both squads reported at peak strength there is a feeling here that Maryland's speed and experience will be too much for a rugged but spotted eleven from Blacksburg.

Maryland Backs Ready.

Maryland aims to employ the same starting line-up that whizzed past the Navy in the last period at Annapolis last Saturday as if the Middies were anchored. Norwood Sothoron, Bill Guckeyson, George Sachs and John Gormley are ready to whip the Tech ends and throw the ball at the pace Maryland reached in gaining more than 340 yards against Navy for 14 first downs to 8. Navy won, 16-to-13, but the score only has served to install the Old Liners as high gun here where the Middies are always highly regarded.

Virginia Tech can use all of its strength, but some of it is not in the best of condition for 60 minutes of fast football. Red Negri, all-conference end, is slated for late duty and Tech's sophomore back-field-threat, 190-pound Foots Dickerson, also will enter the game well after the opening kick-off. Dickerson is Tech's hope. His pass to Fittro last Saturday whipped William and Mary, 6 to 0. His kicking is Tech's best and the Gobblers understand they will need all they can muster in punting and passing to keep step with Maryland's smart attack. Both Negri and Dickerson took it easy all week in an effort to overcome contrary injuries.

Boasts Strong Line.

The Maryland line is a handsome mixture of ambitious youth and heft which has had just enough football to hold a relish for the game. Louis Ennis and Bernie Buscher, ends; John Birkland and Carl Stalfort, tackles; Ed Minion and John Simpson, guards, and Bill Andorka, can not be matched by Tech. All save Andorka played here last year when the Gobblers won, 14 to 0. The Tech line has sophomores in Ben Dodge, tackle, of Norfolk, and Louis Fittro, end. Tris Huffman, 220-pound senior tackle, is the big wallop in a Tech wall that is spotty, whereas Maryland's weight and experience is well distributed from end to end.

The Maryland squad of 38 arrives by boat in the morning. Tech will send a detachment of 26, which is due by train later in the day.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A 13-POINT lead, established in the first three periods, proved barely enough to carry Western High to a 13-to-6 victory over a new deal Roosevelt High eleven yesterday afternoon at Central Stadium.

Trailing by two touchdowns early in the last period, the Rough Riders suddenly took on new life, striking back at the big Red team with a punch which knocked off one touchdown and fell 2 yards short of another.

One decisive 45-yard match in the first period and a lighning-like 80-yard gallop by Phil Maloney, Western's big quarter back, in the third quarter, brought the Georgetowners the first victory recorded in the 1934 interhigh series.

Improved Eleven.

The game put Western definitely in the running for the championship now held by Central, and clearly showed Roosevelt capable of upsetting any school it may meet. The Roosevelt team, which fought Western yard for yard yesterday, was a sharp contrast to the outfit which took a 32-to-0 trouncing from the same team last year.

Instead of floding up after Maloney had widened Western's lead to 13 to 0, the Rough Riders hit back with renewed fury. They started a drive from their own 38-yard line, with fast-stepping Freddie Hill leading the attack, which was stopped only on the 2-yard line, where Western took the ball on downs.

But Roosevelt was in a touchdown mood. It started again from its own 30 a few moments later and this time made goo its march, Spiro Kollus, big end, going over for the touchdown from the 1-yard line after taking a 20-yard pass from Quarter Back Johnnie Saur.

Western Makes Threat.

Western's first scoring push came late in the first period. An exchange of kicks found the Georgetowners on Roosevelt's 45-yard line. The Rough Riders held Bill Summerbell, Western's piston-legged half back, for not gain, and Jack Waddell, Western full back, shot a fast pass to Maloney, who took it on the 25-yard line in the clear. He seemed off for a touchdown, but Al Lyman, alert Roosevelt back, tackled him from behind on the 10-yard line.

Roosevelt held Summerbell for no gain, but Matloney ripped through right tackle to the 2-yard line. Summerbell plunged over on the next play for the touchdown. Waddell's place kick was good for the extra point.

A pass from Saur to Lyman took Roosevelt to the Western 39-yard line before the half ended, and on another occasion Gus Papanicolas recovered a fumble by Summerbell on the Western 38, but neither time was Roosevelt able to get its offensive going.

Gains On Punt Exchange.

Roosevelt gained 27 yards on an exchange of kicks in the third period. Hill made a first down on the Western 33. Hoskinson interfered with Spelta receiving a pass, and it was a first down on the 22. Hill ripped off another first down on the 11-yard line. Hill was stopped, and then Hoskinson threw him for a 5-yard loss, but Saur passed to Lyman, who was downed on the 4-yard line as the period ended. On fourth down, Hill was able to get but 2 yards on a wide attempt around right end.

The Roosevelt touchdown came after Lyman took a pass from Saur and galloped 12 yards to the 18-yard line. Hill picked up 5 around right end, but was held on the next play. Saur then dropped back and tossed a long, lazy pass to Kolius, who stumbled over for the touchdown. Lyman took a pass from Saur for the extra point, but touched his knee to the ground, and the play was not allowed.

Middies Leave For Tilt With Columbia

A brisk run-down of signals and formations was held an hour before departure. All of the players were pronounced physically fit, and the coaches gave reassurance that Fred (Buzz) Borries, back field ace, who has borne the brunt of attack in three previous games, will be ready to start. Borries suffered an attack of catarrhal fever following the University of Maryland game last Saturday and until yesterday fear was felt he would not be available for the clash with Lou Little's pupils.

Forty-three Players on Trip.

Forty-three players made the trip to Gotham. Including coaches and attendants, the party numbered nearly 60, and was under the charge of Lieut. Comdr. John S. (Babe) Brown, jr., football director and graduate manager of athletics. The party was scheduled to bivouac overnight at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club at Rye, N. Y.

Although Columbia is conceded an edge, largely because of a more veteran team, friends of the Middies entertain a degree of confidence of a Navy victory.

Columbia won last year, 14-7.

Intercepted Pass Seals Triumph

Rathjen Runs to Score After Grabbing Ball; Star on Defense.

GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY scored its first victory over Tulsa after four vain attempts tonight at Griffith Stadium, the final score was 10 to 0. A 20-yard field goal by Harry Deming in the second period gave the Colonials their first 3 points. A misdirected forward pass in the final period was responsible for the touchdown that sealed Tulsa's fate.

Red Rathgen, who played a fine game for the downtown school, intercepted a pass on Tulsa's 25-yard line and ran over the goal line untouched for a touchdown. Deming kicked the point. George Washington held the upper hand during the entire fray, after repulsing a Tulsa threat early in the first period.

A beautiful 50-yard punt by Tuffy Leemans extricated the Colonials from an embarrassing situation. Tulsa threatened no more until the last moments of the third period when it pushed and passed its way down to G. W.'s 22-yard line. Here bad judgment on the part of their quarter back cost them a touchdown. Dennis attempted to pass to Berry but the ball was intercepted by Leemans who immediately kicked out of danger.

FIRST PERIOD.

G. W. won the toss and elected to defend the west goal, Tulsa kicking off. Dennis kicked to Hanken, who ran the ball back 15 yards to his own 44. The Colonials came through the line for 8 yards on three plunges, with Leemans carrying the ball before Tuffy kicked out of bounds on Tulsa's 25-yard line.

Tulsa immediately tried several trick plays which failed and Dennis kicked back to George Washington territory. G. W. again tried power plays through the line and just failed of making a first down on its own 47-yard mark. An exchange of kicks followed and G. W. had the ball on its own 20-yard line when Pettit fumbled and Kennon recovered for Tulsa on the 18.

Using a spread formation, Dennis ran 14 yards to the G. W. 3-yard line, where he was thrown out of bounds by Leemans. The Oilmen plowed through to the 3-yard line, where G. W. held for downs. Leemans, kicking from behind his own goal line, got off a beautiful punt that Dennis took exactly on the 50-yard line.

Second Period.

George Washington took a 3-to-0 lead late in the second quarter when 220-pound Harry Deming, Colonial tackle, booted a field goal from placement on the 18-yard line.

Unprecedented Wave of Bets Riding on Each Gridiron Play

By Stuart Cameron.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—An unprecedented wave of betting on college football is sweeping the United States.

A United Press survey completed tonight disclosed that betting on each week's crop of football contests completely overshadows that on the entire World Series.

In New York, Robert Darnell Co., a brokerage firm of nearly 20 years standing, reports that it's a dull week which does not see a turnover of $100,000. This money represents wagers ranging from $20 each to $1,000. It covers all contests in which there is any serious fan interest.

Darnell Co. makes no bets itself.

5 Per Cent Commission.

"We'll accept any bet, no matter how large," a representative of the company told the United Press. "But we get a 'coverer' for it. We don't risk any of our money. Our profits come from the 5 per cent commission."

The heaviest betting is done by old grads who have made their piles and who prove their maintained

By Walter Haight.

YOU could have fried an egg on Trainer J. H. Stotler's head at 3:16 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Stotler, who has charge of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's stables, had sent the mighty Dreel, winner of three straight races, to the post in the Tilghman, the day's feature race at nearby Laurel. The horse looked like the lock bet of the day. The Stotlers, the Vanderbilts and three-fourths of the clubhouse were down on the son of Trojan.

Stotler was particularly anxious to see Dreel gallop back to the winners' circle. He, justly, took a certain amount of personal pride in Dreel's record and, then again, Mr. Vanderbilt out to the track to see the horse do his stuff.

The field of five went to the post at 3:13 o'clock. At 3:14 the horses were bounding out of the starting stalls and another minute and eleven and three-fifths seconds later, Red Wagon, not Dreel, was crossing the finish line the winner. A half length away came Dreel, heading Frank Hayes' Cant Remember by two lengths.

There must have been a Packard engine hidden in Red Wagon yesterday. He certainly did a lot of free wheeling around the Maryland State Fair Association's race track. His rapid knee action brought a pay-off of $8.10 in the $2 mutuels.

*Claimed for $1,500.

Red Wagon hasn't always rolled so fast. In fact, A. C. Compton claimed the horse for $1,500 here week before last. Compton turned him over to the veteran trainer, H. G. Bedwell, and two days later Red Wagon skidded home to gain a $700 purse. Yesterday he raised the intake to $1,400, which, with some betting money, gives Compton an excellent horse gratis.

However, if you are one of those who would like to claim Red Wagon, it is likely that you will have to put $3,000 in the claiming box. He defeated that brand of horses yesterday, and his $1,500 days are over, barring mishap.

W. D. Wright was riding on Red Wagon, and he didn't have to push with one foot. In fact, he found a willing horse under him, and the pair went to the front a hop or two from the start. From than point on it was a case of catch-me-if-you-can. There was none in the field equal to the task. Can't Remember tried it on the back stretch, and Dreel tried it in the late stages. True, Fallon rode Dreel a trifle wide, but it is doubtful if the Vanderbilt racer could have changed the decision by taking any other course.

Miss Katherine Christie's Red Shank, the favorite, paying $4, fenced faultlessly under perfect rating to win the 2 miles steeplechase. He was forced to a drive to throw off Flavius in the final furlong. No Frills was third.

Do Tell fell at the eighth fence, broke his left foreleg and was destroyed. Swansea, which had set the pace to this point, also fell at the eighth obstacle. Neither rider was injured.

Braving Danger, carrying the colors of George Brown, jr., steward at all Maryland meetings, drove to an upset victory in the mile fifth race, a test for maiden 2-year-olds. Firethorn, one of the shortest priced favorites of the fall season, was a much buffeted second, and Countess Ann third. The winner paid $20.40. E. R. Bradley's Banish Fear, an outsider, paying $17.60, came from behind when the favorite, Twoaday bore out on the last turn, to score a half-length victory in the second race, a test for 2-year-olds at six furlongs. Sabin was a stoutly closing third, another three lengths away.

St. Christopher's Beats St. Alban's

Richmond, Oct. 19 (Spl.).—St. Christopher's defeated St. Alban's, of Washington, here this afternoon, 25 to 0, after being held to 7 to 0 in the first half.

Coach Hugh Brenaman started his second team for the local preppers, and Dan Grinnan tallied the first touchdown on a line play in the first quarter. There were no further scoring threats until the third period.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE COUNT, $13.60, $7.40, $5.20; GALLIC, $8.10, $5.60; PRETTY WISE, $25.40.

WISE COUNT, away quickly and forcing a steady pace while following GALLIC closely, gained a slight lead in the closing furlong, and then held on stoutly to win under severe punishment. GALLIC, hustled into a short lead soon after the start, saved ground throughout and then fought it out courageously when the real test came. PRETTY WISE, crowded back directly after the start, found racing room when taken to the outside and then closed with a rush. FERVID went in the first flight, but was not good enough to better her position. JUDGE SCHILLING hung after making a strong bid midway of the turn. FRENCH KNIGHT lacked speed after breaking clear. BALLY BAY stopped and pulled up slightly lame. FRED ALMY was used up racing with the early leaders.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:12. Off at 2:16½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's br f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BANISH FEAR, $17.60, $7.70, $4.30; TWOADAY, $3.90, $2.90; SABLIN, $3.90.

BANISH FEAR, taken under slight restraint when unable to stay with the pacemakers, came through a wide opening on the inside at the stretch turn, then held TWOADAY safe approaching the finish. TWOADAY raced NELL BARTON into early submission, but bore out badly entering the home stretch, then failed to rally when placed to punishment. SABLIN went strongly while in tight quarters early. She closed gamely after finding racing room during the stretch drive. SPANISH LAD could not menace the leaders at any stage. APERITIF went well placed, but could not improve her position. NELL BARTON was done after going three furlongs. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming; steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:41½. Winner, Miss K. Christie's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED SHANK, $4.00, $3.40, $2.70; FLAVIUS, $4.80, $3.00; NO FRILLS, $2.70.

RED SHANK, strongly reserved until reaching the eighth fence, went into an easy lead when SWANSEA fell, stalled off repeated efforts from NO FRILLS and FLAVIUS, then outraced the latter after they came to the last fence on practically even terms. FLAVIUS, prominent throughout, made a strong bid coming to the last fence, but could not match the winner's speed on the flat. NO FRILLS offered a strong challenge at the twelfth jump, but weakened badly thereafter. ROZELL was never able to better his position. ROLLICKING PRINCESS was always far back. The others were outrun. SWANSEA was enjoying a safe lead when he fell heavily at the eighth fence. DO TELL fell at the same jump, broke her leg, and was destroyed.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Tilghman. For all ages (foaled in Maryland). Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:13. Off at 3:14. Winner, A. C. Compton's ch. g. (4), by Canteen—Dynamite. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:11 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED WAGON, $8.10, $3.80, $2.80; DREEL, $2.50, $2.20; CANT REMEMBER, $2.40.

RED WAGON, having the most speed to take command, was steadied along while resisting CANT REMEMBER, responded gamely when shaken up during the stretch drive, and then left to win off by DREEL. Latter, eased back directly after the break and steered wide thereafter, closed fast when placed to punishment in the last furlong. CANT REMEMBER raced strongly until midway of the home stretch, then weakened. GREYGLADE was unable to offer contention. LAW SUIT was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:42. Winner, Brown Jr.'s ch. c. (2), by Jay Cruiser—Dance. Trained by C. Sutphin. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:13 4-5, 1:40 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRAVING DANGER, $20.40, $4.50, $2.80; FIRETHORN, $2.60, $2.30; COUNTESS ANN, $2.70.

BRAVING DANGER, stoutly restrained after reaching a forward position at the entrance into the back stretch, disposed of TEN LAW when ready, drew clear, and held FIRETHORN safe on the closing drive. FIRETHORN, taken extremely wide at the first turn, went into a contending position midway of the back stretch, made a brief bid approaching the home stretch and then weakened. COUNTESS ANN, sluggish in the first five furlongs, settled in her stride and then closed willingly. TEN LAW began fast, but tired in the half-mile. MINTFALON saved a lot of ground going to the first turn, but was never a factor. DOUBLE SWEEP stopped early.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Ashton. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:12. Off at 4:13. Winner, Mrs. C. Phillips' ch. g. (5), by Pennant—Precious. Trained by C. Phillips. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13, 1:39, 1:45 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEMAPHORE, $4.10, $2.80, $2.40; SUN MONK, $4.70, $3.00; ASHEN, $3.30.

SEMAPHORE, avoiding crowding directly after the start, raced ASHEN into submission to gain a slight lead, then asserted himself when shaken up for the final drive, and came out gradually nearing the finish. SUN MONK, forced to race on the outside to secure racing room, bettered his position steadily, then came courageously at the end. ASHEN forced a steady pace after being displaced and held on well. FLAGSTONE, interfered with by ASHEN crossed over directly after the start, was taken to the outside early, then saved ground at the stretch turn, but was unable to better his position. FLAMING MAMIE was caught in a jam right after the start and then trailed throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:42. Off at 5:42½. Winner, Mrs. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CAREFUL, $11.60, $5.10, $3.20; CORRYMEELA, $4.90, $2.90; FAIRLY WILD, $2.80.

MISS CAREFUL, taken under steadying restraint when CORRYMEELA was rushed to the front, remained close to the pacemaker until reaching the home stretch, then gained a brief lead in the final furlong to hold on resolutely. CORRYMEELA was tiptoed to gain the lead, was headed when reaching the stretch, and then held on gamely under a drive. FAIRLY WILD overcame early interference and finished stoutly. XANDRA followed within striking distance of the leaders, made a sharp move entering the home stretch, but weakened in the final furlong. WISE ADVOCATE was unable to enter contention. TRIANGULAR was held safe. ULTIM was outrun.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:12. Off at 5:13½. Winner, Mrs. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REGO, $4.80, $3.10, $2.80; TRIOLET, $4.70, $4.00; THIS PLAY, $8.80.

REGO, rated on the outside of the leaders for the first six furlongs, swung to the outside at the final turn to take command, held on stoutly thereafter and outstayed TRIOLET. Latter moved up menacingly midway of the final turn, then came stoutly in the final issue. THIS PLAY came again after dropping back at the final curve. BUNTING faltered after making a strong challenge in the last five-sixteenths. INFLEE closed stoutly. TIGHT WAD was weakly handled. DONA DULCIN stopped, as did KILTAMOND.

Leubkert Juggles Ball Twice on Foe's Soil, Ending Drives.

ST. JOHN'S lived up to its reputation as the "Fighting Johnnies" by holding Gonzaga High's strong eleven to a scoreless tie in their annual clash at Eastern Stadium yesterday afternoon. The result of the game left the prep school championship race still wide open.

A favorite to win, Gonzaga found itself facing an inspired team, which fought off challenge after challenge of the Purple and finally had Gonzaga in the shadows of its own goal posts as the game ended.

Fumbles Are Costly.

A fumbling weakness on the part of Malcolm Leubkert, Gonzaga's big, fast quarter back, was one of the principal factors in the failure of the Purple to score. Twice Leubkert juggled the ball around to lose it to St. John's when deep in his opponents' territory.

In the first period, Gonzaga went to St. John's 15-yard line, only to lose the ball as Leubkert mishandled it. Again, in the final quarter, Leubkert brought another drive to a halt when he fumbled on the 9-yard line, St. John's recovering. A few minutes before the final whistle, he fumbled on his own 2-yard line, but a 15-yard penalty for illegal use of the hands set the Johnnies back. The game ended as Barrett was stopped on the 12-yard line.

Starts Off Strongly.

Gonzaga started off strongly, an 18-yard run capping a steady drive to St. John's 37-yard line, but lost the ball on a fumble. Shortly afterward it went to St. John's 20-yard line on a passing attack, only to lose the ball on downs.

Leubkert fumbled on the next drive, to give St. John's the ball on its own 31 after a pass from Boyle to Curran had netted 18 yards. St. John's was forced to kick, however, as the second quarter opened, and a pass from Leubkert to Curran netted 55 yards, Curran being hauled down after racing to St. John's 20-yard line. Leubkert's fumble ended the threat on the next play.

Gridiron Bets

loyalty to dear old Almy Mammy by betting in large chunks.

"A good average bet for this type of man is around $200," a Darnell official said. "It's often $500. We regard $1,000 as a 'good bet' but sometimes they go higher."

The deluge of money comes in late each week. Darnell company sends its list of odds to the various college newspapers. Some publish them, giving the street addresses of the commission, and the undergraduate allowance money begins trickling in.

This betting is only a fraction of the total done in New York alone. Hundreds of offices conduct pools, with the play ranging from dimes to dollars per game and which cover some 30 or 40 games each week.

Then there's the "football card" method of betting which looks so easy on Friday and so tough late Saturday evening.

The card idea is like this: You get a duplicate list of 15 games. You can play as heavily as you like—50 cents, $1, $5, $10 or more. You can pick as many games as you like, but you must pick at least six. All right, suppose you put up $1 on your card of six choices and suppose (which, probably, will not be the case) you are right.

You will then, according to the terms on the card, get "10 points." "Points," of course, are dollars. Pick seven right and you get $13. Eight nets $20; 9, $30; 12, $90; 15, $150. Few ring the bell at even six, and the line of winners on the longer ventures narrows down to the diminishing point. Most betting is done on the basis of six winners. Most bets are at $1 per card. Many try it, few collect.

One man's guess is as good as another, and no positive statement can be made. Its fairly safe, however, to reckon the weekly handle of football wagering in New York alone runs up above the $1,000,000-mark.

Nor can there be any exact estimate made for other cities, although it is believed the turnover in Los Angeles—largely movie colony money—nearly duplicates the total here. St. Louis is another big betting town. So are Chicago, New Orleans, San Francisco and Lexington, Ky.

Quarantine Lifted, Woodberry Resumes

Orange, Va., Oct. 19 (Spl.).—Woodberry Forest Academy resumes its football schedule here tomorrow after a brief lay-off due to a quarantine for infantile paralysis. Augusta Military Academy will form the opposition.

The visitors are undefeated this year. Foreman, regular Augusta back, will be at his regular position after being on the sidelines with injuries since the game with Central High of Washington.

Through Edgren's Eyes

Dixie Teams in Big Games On Far-Flung Battle Front

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—The season's most far-flung battlefront for Southern Conference teams will stretch from chilly New Hampshire to balmy Florida tomorrow, with heavy firing likely to break out at any point.

At the two extremes of this extensive gridiron, N. C. State's Wolfpack will battle Florida's 'Gators at Tampa and Virginia's Cavaliers will take on Dartmouth's favored eleven at Hanover, but much of the heavy artillery will be concentrated in Virginia and North Carolina.

North Carolina's Tarheels, still jubilant over their victory over Georgia, at Chapel Hill faced a dangerous foe in Kentucky's Wildcats, while Maryland and Virginia Tech, engaging at Norfolk in the only intra-conference fight on the card, offered another headlining attraction. Virginia Military and Richmond clash at Richmond.

Generals at Princeton.

Washington and Lee meets Princeton's reputedly ferocious Tigers at Princeton, while Duke, the only undefeated team in the circuit, was rated a big edge over Davidson's willing Wildcats.

Similarly Princeton is supposed to win almost as it pleases, but the Washigton and Lee contingent, battle tested, will not suffer from stage fright. Furthermore, the Generals will show the Tigers one of the huskiest forewalls they'll have to battle this season. With a minimum of injuries, the Generals should give Princeton an interesting afternoon.

North Carolina may have to guard against a let-down in the game with Kentucky, although on their records the Wildcats don't have enough power to spoil the Tarheels' home-coming day celebration. Davidson also has a home-coming celebration, but even the stimulus of the returning alumni is expected to be insufficient to subdue the Blue Devils, who will be led into battle by the great "Corky" Cornelius.

Maryland Aerials Feared.

The Maryland-Tech game will hold a large share of the spotlight, and deservedly so. With their far-famed aerial attack and a good running game with Norwood Sothoron packing the punch, the Old Liners will be prime favorites.

Probably as closely fought as any of them will be the battle at Miami with State's Wolf Pack enjoying a slight edge in pregame forecasting. What should be another close one will be the V. M. I.-Richmond clash, with the outcome regarded as a tossup. Richmond has won for the last three years.

Miller's Safety Beats Harrisonburg High

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 19 (Spl.). Miller School's football eleven won from Harrisonburg High this afternoon, 2 to 0. The slight margin of victory came as Blase, Harrisonburg full back, recovered a bad pass from center behind his goal line.

Miller School had a decided edge in yardage gained and twice threatened the visitors goal.

Thomasson and Wood, in the line, and Critzer and Morgan, backs, starred for Miller, while the work of Wine was outstanding for Harrisonburg.

G. W. Victor

The score came a few plays after a Tulsa fumble well in its own territory.

Ray Hanken, G. W. back, recovered the loose pigskin on the Tulsa 35-yard line when Dennis, Tulsa back, dropped the ball. Leemans went through for 5 yards and then tossed a short pass to Kavalier for a first down on the 18-yard line. Leemans was held for no gain. Plotnicki was sent in as quarter back for Kavalier.

Leemans again was stopped and Deming dropped back and kicked cleanly through the uprights. The teams were battling at midfield as the half ended.

Third Period.

Tulsa elected to kick off at the beginning of the second half, Dennis kicking to Kavalier on the 12-yard line. Kavalier returned the ball to his own 30-yard mark. With Reeves Pettit and Plotnicki carrying the ball, George Washington reeled off four consecutive first downs, driving to Tulso's 27-yard line, where Reeves failed by inches to make another first down. Tulsa immediately marched back up the field, Berry and Dennis bearing the brunt of the attack. Berry pulled a surprise pass to Dugger that was good for a 27-yard gain and placed the ball on G. W.'s 27-yard line. He was almost clear for a touchdown, but Rathgen, G. W. center, pulled him down from behind, as the third period ended with the socre G. W. U., 3, Tulsa, 0.

Fouth Period.

Tulsa opened up with a barrage of passes in a vain attempt to score and passed itself into defeat. W. W.'s secondary intercepted most of the heaves, usually lon, loping pegs. Red Rathgen, G. W. center, grabbed one of these on Tulsa's 25-yard line and raced unmolested over the goal line that safely established G. W.'s supremacy. Deming kicked the goal. Tulsa continued passing and George Washington continued to intercept them. Bill Parrish caught one at midfield just as the game ended. Fnial score—G. W. U., 10; Tulsa, 0.

Virginia Teams Underdogs Today

V. P. I., Cavaliers, V. M. I. Face Severe Tests at Home, Abroad.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 19 (AP).—With the exception of Emory and Henry's Wasps who are conceded a big edge in their tussle with Roanoke's Maroons, No Virginia team will enjoy a favorite's role in Saturday's football warfare.

Headlining the bill will be games at Norfolk, where the V. P. I.'s Gobblers meet a strong Maryland team and at Richmond, where the Spiders of the University of Richmond, seeking their fourth victory over V. M. I. in as many years, face a determined and apparently up-and-coming Cadet team.

If V. P. I. can solve the Maryland aerial attack, something that no other team has quite succeeded in doing this season, their chances will be better but the Old Liners will enter the game a prime favorite to "take" the Techmen.

Richmond Backs Dangerous.

V. M. I. will throw a husky line against Richmond's rugged fore wall, but the Spiders, if clicking on all cylinders, should show a more versatile and dangerous back field combination with most observers agreeing that the breaks of the game may be the determining factor in the ultimate decision.

Virginia's teams that go a-traveling, have the toughest jobs of the day, however, with Washington and Lee's Generals bucking up against a potentially great Princeton eleven and the University of Virginia Cavaliers playing Dartmouth at Hanover, N. H. Hampden-Sydney's Tigers will meet the Delaware eleven at Newark, Del.

Elon at Ashland.

Meanwhile at Ashland the Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets, their record of home victories broken by the St. John's conquest, have a tough afternoon in prospect in company with Elon's Christians. Bridgewater's Eagles, still trying for their first victory of the season, will have an underdog's job against Gallaudet at Bridgewater.

Virginia Tech's Gobblers, parading at the top of the State championship line-up at this writing, undoubtedly will have to show an improved brand of football if they are to inaugurate their Southern Conference season wtih a victory over the strong Maryland eleven.

Tech Lacks Power.

Although they have surprised with sensational exhibitions, particularly sustained touchdown marches, the Techmen apparently have lacked the concentrated power to push across enough touchdowns in games with outstanding foes. They had more than moderate success in breaking up the William and Mary passing game a week ago, but they're expecting a much more baffling aerial game from the Old Liners.

Both V. M. I. and Richmond need victories, the Cadets to break their losing streak, which has run through three consecutive games, and the Spiders to prove to the home fans that the victory over Cornell was no "fluke." The Spiders were whipped by Emory and Henry's Wasps a week ago, while Columbia was overpowering the Cadets.

Episcopal Works Hard.

Alexandria, Oct. 19 (Spl.).—Episcopal High was put through a stiff workout here today in preparation for tomorrow's game with McGuire Prep, of Richmond. The Virginians' famed aerial attack has prompted Coach Cardwell to build up a strong passing defense.

Hoyas to Play W. & M. Today At Stadium

Seek Third Victory of '34; Are at Full Strength; Odds About Even.

GEORGETOWN'S pigskin brigade goes a-huntin' for its third consecutive victory of the season this afternoon at Griffith Stadium, where it meets William and Mary at 2:30 o'clock.

Exhibiting surprising offensive power and a stone-wall defense in its first two games, the Hoyas bowled over Mount St. Mary's, 18-0, and Manhattan, 9-0. Today they face one of the Old Dominion's strongest and most colorful teams, and the odds are about even on the outcome.

Georgetown will have its full strength available. Frank Williamson, 230-pound center, who injured an ankle earlier in the week, and Capt. Joe Saverine, half back, are again in harness and slated to start. Joe Kelliher, 160-pound guard, is the only doubtful man. His shoulder is still ailing.

Weight Advantage.

William and Mary will have a slight weight advantage in the line this afternoon. Georgetown will be heavier from tackle to tackle, but the Indians' heft is well distributed.

The Virginians have lost two games, to Navy and Emory-Henry, but they were impressive in both, giving evidence of coming fast as the season progressed. Emory-Henry, incidentally one of the strongest if not the best team in all Virginia this year, was obliged to go into the air for winning points. It failed miserably through the line.

Georgetown outplayed William and Mary last year but lost, 13-7, when Junie Smith intercepted a lateral pass on the 10-yard line and raced 90 yards for the winning touchdown. Chubby Parcells, who directed the Hoyas in that game, again will be at the helm, but he'll make no similar mistakes. Parcells has improved at least 50 per cent over 1933, both as a player and field general.

Hagerty Confident.

Although the Hilltoppers will meet the invaders with a double-barrelled attack, Coach Jack Hagerty said yesterday he is looking beyond this game to the N. Y. U. affair in New York next week. Hagerty believes his boys will stop William and Mary.

The visitors will bring a small but fast backfield, which is adept at skirting ends and in the aerial game. Shade will start at quarter with Woodward and Bryant at halves, and Yerkes full back.

Emory and Henry Opposes Roanoke

Close Battle Between Old Rivals Seen Tonight.

Emory, Va., Oct. 19 (Spl.).—The Emory and Henry Wasps went through their second scrimmage of the week yesterday in preparation for the game with Roanoke College here tomorrow night. The first-string men were kept on defense during most of the practice, while a freshman team, equipped with Roanoke plays and formations, did all of the ball carrying.

In past years Roanoke-Emory games have always been close contests, and this season's tussle promises to be no exception. Last year the score was 7-0 in favor of the Wasps.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 19 (Spl.). Luray High School held Handley High School to a scoreless tie on the Handley Stadium field here this afternoon.

Handley threatened to score at different times, and had the ball deep in the visitors' territory most of the game. During the closing minutes, Thrift, of Handley, juggled the ball over the opponents' goal line and dropped it.

Stocks Shrink Under Drain of Small Losses

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The stalemate in the stock market remained unbroken today.

The tone was easier all around in financial markets. But losses were small for the most part and price movements mixed as Wall Street waited for news to stir speculation.

Stocks stuck closely to the groove the market has occupied all week, around the upper limits of the recent trading range. Trading was dull, volume declining to 527,512 shares against 655,210 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks sagged three-tenths of a point to 71.7, about where it stood Monday.

Exchange Holds Attention.

Some attention was diverted to foreign exchange in connection with the conference of the European gold bloc nations at Brussels. The gold bloc currencies lost ground to the dollar and the British pound, the latter moving up about a cent to $4.95.

The spread of price-cutting along the gasoline front kept oil shares in disfavor. Standard Oil of New Jersey sold at a new 1934 low at 40, where it was off a point. Most of the oil shares hung around their lows of the year.

Pivotal shares moved in a narrow range. American Telephone, J. I. Case, General Electric, Santa Fe, United States Steel, Montgomery Ward, Johns Manville, Chrysler and International Harvester finished with little or no change.

Metal Shares Steady.

Non-ferrous metal shares steadied with the spot price of silver. Packing shares remained in the speculative limelight without extending previous gains importantly. An early bulge in alcohol shares was attributed to seasonal influences.

Trade news raised hopes for slow business improvement. Retail demand for goods was described by Dun & Bradstreet's weekly review as running 8 to 12 per cent ahead of last year. Cram's reports estimated automobile production this week had increased 3,668 units over the preceding week. The total, at 29,069, was only 1,050 under that of the like week of last year.

Trade Trends.

Canned foods—Raising an earlier estimate, compiled during the drought period, the National Canners Association places this season's pea pack at 15,359,653 cases, an increase of 2,876,645 cases over 1933 and the highest since 1930, when the pack was 22,035,212 cases.

Gasoline—The spot market continued weak, although pressure of low priced offerings is not as marked as it was a week ago, according to trade quarters. The current market on low octane material remains around 2¾ to 3 cents a gallon, with some gasoline available at 2½ cents in Oklahoma, and at still lower levels in east Texas.

Grocery chain sales—Daily average sales of grocery stores showed an increase in dollar volume from August to September of about 3½ per cent, according to preliminary estimates of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Foreign Cotton Making Inroads On American Growths as Result Of Our Price-Raising Policies

By Special Writer of The Post.

During August and September, cotton exports showed a drop of 47 per cent, compared with the corresponding period a year ago, when shipments were abnormally heavy, and a decline of 28 per cent as compared with the average for the 10 years ended 1932.

Secretary Wallace says that he anticipates reduced foreign sales during the current marketing season, but denies that the expected decline is due to the AAA control program. Nevertheless, the marketing experts of the Department of Agriculture are beginning to be seriously disturbed about the future of the export trade if the price raising policies of the Administration are not modified. On the basis of September prices, for example, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates that the parity farm price for cotton was 15.6 cents per pound. To the extent that the prices of commodities bought by farmers rise, further advances in this parity price will follow. Consequently if the goal set by the agricultural adjustment act is seriously aimed at, the outlook for our export trade in cotton is distinctly doomed.

Already the rise in American cotton prices has caused a pronounced increase in consumption of foreign growths. During August and September, for instance, the average price of three types of Indian cotton in Liverpool was equal to about 67 per cent of the average price of American middling and low middling as contrasted with 79 per cent a year ago, and 69 per cent in 1932. Largely due to price disparities, world consumption of all foreign cottons increased about 13 per cent during the 1933-34 season, while consumption of American cotton showed a slight decline from the preceding year. Outside of India, mill consumption of Indian cotton rose about 30 per cent, contrasted with a decrease of 2 per cent in foreign consumption of American cotton, while consumption of Egyptian cotton reached record proportions.

Department of Agriculture Concerned About Outlook.

That the Department of Agriculture is concerned about the outlook is evident from the emphasis which current marketing publications of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics put upon the displacement of American cotton by foreign growths.

The department is also studying the possibilities of further expansion of foreign acreage. In India and Egypt lands suitable for cotton may be diverted to the growing of other crops and it is difficult to determine the extent to which further expansion may proceed under favorable conditions.

At the present time, however, the rapid development of cotton growing in Brazil seems to be attracting the most attention, although Secretary Wallace extracts comfort from a belief that an increase in coffee prices would act as a break upon cotton output there. However, the area in Brazilian cotton in 1933-34 expanded to 2,500,000 acres, as contrasted with 1,800,000 acres the previous year, and output rose 116 per cent.

Efforts to extend cotton growing outside the United States have been carried on for many years, especially by the British, who have tried to emancipate themselves from dependence upon American cotton supplies. Undoubtedly, the control measures adopted by the AAA have made foreign manufacturers even more eager to have larger alternative sources of supply, while higher prices have encouraged production to that end. In time, too, with the growing industrialization of the East, cotton produced in India, China and Russia will doubtless supply manufacturing needs in that part of the world, cutting off markets for American cotton in countries formerly fabricating goods for export to those regions. Strong nationalistic tendencies, reinforced by our particularistic policies are, therefore, at work to bring about a permanent reduction of our cotton export trade, even if steps are taken to remove the handicaps resulting from policies that raise prices above world levels.

Cotton Plays Large Part in U. S. Credit.

Quite apart from the revolutionary readjustments in domestic agriculture that would result from permanent loss of a large part of our cotton export trade, the effect upon the trade balance of the United States would be profound.

It is only necessary to examine the export statistics of past years to realize what a tremendous part cotton has played in providing us with foreign credits with which to pay for imports and later build up credit balances for investment in foreign countries. Prior to the war the United States was a net debtor to the rest of the world, but by 1933 it is estimated that we were creditors on balance to the extent of $20,600,000,000.

The cotton exports of the last 38 years just about equaled this total credit. So it is easy to understand what the loss of that trade would mean to us and how radically it would affect our status as a lender of capital to other countries.

Bond Market Is Trendless in Light Decline

Federal Issues Steady After Drop; Sales Cut to 10,232,000.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The bond market was generally trendless today and small gains and losses predominated at the finish of the dull session.

Transfers totaled $10,232,000, par value, against $11,400,000 yesterday, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues eased one-tenth of a point.

United States Government securities steadied after earlier declines, although the turnover in this department amounted to only about $2,810,000, compared with $3,450,000 on Thursday.

Advances in Majority.

At the close advances of 1-32d to 5-32ds of a point were in the majority. Treasury 3¼s of 1944-46, the maturity into which the recently redemeed Liberty Fourth 4¼s were converted, were the most active and held the day's largest gain.

Two of the Home Owners' loan issues were up 2-32ds each, one was unchanged, and Federal Farm Mortgage 3s eased 1-32d while the 3¼s were up as much. Some of the Treasurys and Libertys yielded 1-32d to 4-32ds.

Followers of the Federals were still somewhat hesitant pending announcement of the terms on which a banking syndicate will float $50,000,000 more Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds.

New Highs for Year.

Among the corporation groups, Armour & Co. 4½s and 5½s edged up to 101⅞ and 99¼, respectively, new highs for the year. Shell Union Oil 5s, with warrants, which have been called for November 19, also advanced fractionally to 102½, a new 1934 peak. The call price is 102.

Other firm spots included Interboro Rapid Transit 6s, up 2⅜ at 53½; Inland Steel 4½s, up 1 at 107½; McCrory Store 5½s, up 2½ at 86¾, and Wheeling Steel 4½s, up 2½ at 84. An easier tone was displayed by some issues of Union Pacific, Paramount, N. Y. Central, International Telephone, Great Northern, Cleveland Union Terminal, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Chesspeake & Ohio and Baltimore & Ohio.

German obligations were a trifle irregular, but bonds of Mexico, Poland, Australia and Austria firmed.

Curb's Prices Turn Uneven In Dull Sales

Metals and Specialties Fall as Trading Drops to 126,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The curb market continued in the groove of indecisive price movements today. Many leading shares finished virtually unchanged. Metals and a few specialties worked lower. Trading was dull.

The list backed and filled in the forenoon. Scattered offerings appeared later but a slight stiffening of prices marked the final dealings.

Fisk Rubber preferred rose 4 points in a small transfer. Declines of about 2 points were shown by Parker Rust Proof, Singer Manufacturing and Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, also in thin dealings.

Gulf Oil, Lake Shore, Hiram Walker and Newmont eased, while issues ending unchanged to a bit higher included Aluminum Co. of America, Creole Petroleum, Swift & Co., Swift Internacionale, Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Pan-American Airways and Sherwin Williams.

Transfers approximated 126,000 shares compared with 161,000 yesterday.

London—Settlement arrangements restricted business on the stock exchange today, and trading consisted principally of investment buying. Gilt-edged securities were helped by the success of the flotation of the new electric issues, while the preference shares of Argentine railroads were weak owing to the postponement of the Central Argentine dividend. Speculative stocks were offered at lower prices, and the market closed irregular.

Paris—Uneasiness over the cabinet's stability caused rentes to decline on the bourse today, with most of the list following. Some improvement was recorded toward the end of the session. Prices recovered further at the closing.

Berlin—Traders on the boerse favored bonds today which gained throughout the session, but stocks were irregular. The market closed weak.

Wool Market.

Boston, Oct. 19 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agric.). A few fair-sized lots of average staple 12-month Texas wool were sold recently at around 70 cents scoured basis. Average to good French combing 64s and finer territory wool sold occasionally at 67@70 cents scoured basis, although much of the demand was for short French combing at 63@65 cents. Ohio fine Delaine brought 27@28 cents in the grease, according to estimated shrinkage. Strictly combing 58s, 60s, ½-blood Ohio and similar fleeces moved at 28@29 cents in the grease.

Wheat Tumbles On Stop-Loss Selling Drive

Weaker Liverpool Prices Blamed; All Other Grains Drop.

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—Uncertainties connected with approach of November elections received some of the blame for stop-loss selling today that tumbled wheat prices down almost 2 cents.

Pronounced weakness of the Liverpool wheat market, together with failure of speculative demand to broaden in Chicago, did much to start the selling movement.

As a result, the dollar sign was eliminated from wheat quotations here, and the market reached the lowest level since October 10.

Wheat Closes Nervous.

With something of a rally in evidence at the last, wheat closed nervous ⅞ to 1¼ under yesterday's finish; May, 99 to 99¼; Corn, ⅜ to 1⅛ off; May, 79⅜ to 79½; Oats, ⅜ to 1 cent down, and provisions exactly the same as yesterday's latest figures.

Liquidating sales of wheat futures here came largely from professional traders, who of late had been on the purchase side of the market. Partial relief from drought over domestic winter wheat territory Southwest appeared to have removed much buying support.

Furthemore, Liverpool cables told of pressure to sell Australian wheat, which was offered at a new low-price record for the season. Australian reports said timely rains were checking crop deterioration.

Recovery Is Started.

It was not until December and May wheat in Chicago had both fallen to well below 99 cents that buying power developed enough volume to bring about any impressive recovery. Rallies of fractional extent, however, were promoted at times by purchases of wheat against sales of corn.

Assertions were current that, should even a moderate amount of new corn be sold to terminal centers, decided likelihood existed the total corn visible supply this winter will exceed the all-time high record set last winter, 66,694,000 bushels. Talk also was heard that at prevailing quotations a farmer would receive the highest price obtainable for corn in the last four years, a cash return greater than could be secured through feeding operations. Oats and rye weakened with corn and wheat.

Provisions were steadied by hog market upturns and by liberal shipments of lard.

Agricultural Exports Gain In Past Year

Value of Products Shipped by U. S. Increase to $787,000,000.

(Associated Press.)

Exports of agricultural products from the United States were reported yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to have been valued at $787,000,000 during the year ended June 30, 1934, compared with $590,000,000 during the previous year, though the volume dropped.

The flow of 44 leading farm products during the year 1933-34 showed an index of 83 compared with 85 the year before, using the period 1909 to 1914 as the base average.

Agricultural exports during the past year represented 39 per cent of the total United States exports, compared with 42 per cent in 1932-33, "indicating that the revival in value of exports of non-agricultural products was more pronounced than in that of exports of agricultural products," the Bureau said.

The value of all exports during the year was $2,009,000,000 compared with $1,413,000,000 during the preceding year.

One of the chief reasons for the low volume index of agricultural exports in 1933-34, was the reduced purchases of cotton. Foreign countries took only 8,336,000 bales last year compared with 8,647,000 bales the year before. However, the value of the 1933-34 cotton exports was $438,000,000 compared with $322,000,000 the previous year.

The export volume of apples, pears, raisins, wheat, rye, barley, corn, oats, oatmeal and rice declined last year compared with 1932-33. Export of oranges, grapefruit and dried fruits showed slight increases. A continuation of the downward trend in exports of lard, oil seeds and oil seed products was also noted.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Business activity "declined measurably" in September, according to the monthly report of the conference of statisticians in industry of the National Industrial Conference Board.

The survey declared that "the succession of downward movements in recent months wiped out advances made since last November, and brought the general level of production to where it was in the second quarter of 1933."

Bond offerings by four large cities account for about half of the $12,094,517 total of all new State and municipal financing scheduled for the coming week, says the "Daily Bond Buyer." The revised total for the past week was $8,779,004. The largest offerings will be made by the City and County of San Francisco; Passaic, N. J.; Rochester, N. Y., and Buffalo, N. Y.

The National Association of Flat Rolled Steel Manufacturers reports September sales of sheet steel at 77,063 tons, or 23.7 per cent of the industry's capacity. Production came to 76,051 tons, while shipments aggregated 73,260 tons. Unfilled tonnage as of October 1 was 67,062 tons.

Stockholders of the Alaska Mining & Power Co. voted at a special meeting to sell the company's physical properties, including power rights, to Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Co. for 84,703 shares of Alaska Juneau stock.

Bond offerings during the current week totaled $11,804,000, compared with $30,716,000 the week before and with $6,900,000 a year ago.

Shell Union Will Retire Issue of $26,000,000

At the same time it was stated the corporation has placed with private bankers $9,000,00 of its one, two and three year 2½ per cent serial notes, dated November 1 and due serially in equal amounts in three years. History Repeats.

It's true that history repeats, in love and statesmanship and crimes; and everything the voter meets has happened 40,000,000 times. You see a maid so bright and fair you think her equal never was; and she has lovely eyes and hair, and all the gifts of Santa Claus. But there have been a million maids as beautiful and fair as she; and they have joined the silent shades beyond the quiet, shoreless sea. The Man of Destiny arrives, and governs with an iron hand; and men inform their yawning wives that no one ever was so grand. But there were Cromwells long ago, and Caesars ruled the land and seas, and no one living, that we know, is in a class with men like these. The poet, full of lambent fire, and inspiration high and true, sits down and hits the living lyre, and strikes a note men say is new. And then he lets his hair grow long, and wears a quaint and ragged beard, and men declare, in accents strong, his equal has not yet appeared. But there were Homers in the past, before tin cars burned gasoline, whose genius was so great and vast that modern bards seem cheap and mean. The painter paints a pea-green cow that stands behind a farmyard cart; and his admirers thunder, "Now, at last we have a work of art." But there were Rembrandts who could take some ochre and some linseed oil, and a great masterpiece they'd make, according to the rules of Hoyle.

On the Air Today

By George M. Adams, Jr.

WHEN you hear the yowl of an infant tonight at 10 o'clock, WJSV will be on the air with a half-hour parade of its outstanding features, past, present and future, celebrating its second anniversary as the Washington member of the Columbia Broadcasting System. The musical banquet previously announced has been discarded.

WJSV personalities to be heard include the old standbys, Harold Gray in his "Gray Moods;" Larry Elliott, with blackface impersonations, and Warren Sweeney in some soothing Chopin numbers . . . Jess Willard, assistant manager of the station, who was the original announcer, will act as master of ceremonies.

Arthur "The Great" Godfrey will head the list of current favorites with Arch MacDonald, sports announcer, and Dale Wimbrow, minstrelist, chiming in. Ted Church, assistant manager in charge of the network, will render flashbacks into famous "firsts" captured by the station . . . such as Monument climbing.

Surprise! The next feature will look into the future . . . Harry C. Butcher, manager of WJSV, will speak briefly and read messages from William S. Paley, president of the system, and from Bob Trout, WJSV's slim member, who is shadowing the President currently.

SINCE announcement here last Saturday that "John Peel," the world's most famous hunting song, would be heard over C. B. S. networks today, phone inquiries have indicated that listeners are anticipating its hauntingly beautiful melody.

So from 11 to 11:15 a. m. today you'll hear historic ceremonies honoring the father of the fox hunt at Caldbeck, England, where John Peel was born 100 years ago. The account will bring to the air sounds of baying hounds, huntsmen's cries and the singing of the beloved melody, "D'ye ken John Peel at the break of day."

N. B. C. HAS unearthed a new tenor with a pleasing, high range not unlike Donald Novis. The lad . . . he is 23 . . . is El Gerry, a New Jerseyite, who got his start in radio seven years ago with "Art" Godfrey on WFBR in Baltimore.

Gerry has since traveled somewhat around the radio globe, making appearances on stations in St. Louis, Milwaukee, Detroit, Baltimore and other points, including Hollywood, where he sojourned for three years. From the looks of things, it's quite possible that he'll be used soon on a local sustaining spot.

DIFFERENCE in time between the United States and England will prevent a description of the actual take-off of the London-to-Melbourne air races today. But an eye-witness account of the start of the 11,000-mile flight will be short-waved here over N. B. C. at 8:45 a. m. (locally WMAL).

You'll hear an observer of the British Broadcasting System with his impressions of the take-off obtained by accompanying the fliers several miles out to sea. More than 50 ships, 18 of them American, will participate for the $40,000 prize.

People's Marks 29th Birthday Of Drug Chain

'Business as Usual,' Says Dr. M. G. Gibbs, Who Founded Stores.

Yesterday was an important anniversary for Dr. Malcolm G. Gibbs and his famous chain of 115 People's drug stores, located in eight States and the District.

For, just 29 years ago yesterday, Dr. Gibbs founded the business, which was to develop into one of the greatest pharmacy chains in the world.

The People's drug stores are the young giant that grew from the original, old-fashioned pharmacy and apothecary shop in which Dr. Gibbs started his business.

Founded in 1905.

Back in 1905 Dr. Gibbs, already an expert pharmacist, laid the foundation for his enterprise, which was built by a little capital, unlimited energy and skill and a swiftly gained reputation for professional integrity.

In 1898 Dr. Gibbs came to Washington from his home in Union City, Tenn., and got his first job as a clerk in the Merchants' Modern Pharmacy at Eleventh and F streets northwest.

Two nights each week he attended the National Pharmacy College, now George Washington College of Pharmacy, and received his degree at the end of three years of study.

His first store, which he opened in 1905, was named "People's Store." Seven years later Dr. Gibbs added another store to his chain.

"Business As Usual."

Yesterday, as he sat at his desk atop the huge People's warehouses, at P street and Florida avenue northeast, Dr. Gibbs controlled 37 stores in the Washington area alone, as well as more than twice as many elsewhere.

"It's been business as usual today," beamed Dr. Gibbs.

He plays "drug store" for recreation, and develops new ideas for his corporation, which employs 1,700 persons and does a business of $15,000,000 annually.

15 Per Cent on Liquor Put as Wholesale Profit

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—Wholesale liquor dealers were asked to establish a minimum mark-up to retailers of 15 per cent in a resolution adopted by the National Price Stabilization Conference, which concluded its deliberations here today.

Sunday School Group to Meet

D. C. Association Will Hold Convention Monday and Tuesday.

The District of Columbia Sunday School Association will hold its forty-first annual convention at 7:45 p. m., Monday and Tuesday in the Ninth Street Christian Church.

Sir Harold Macintosh, of Halifax, England, president of the World's Sunday School Association, and Dr. Robert M. Hopkins, general secretary, will deliver addresses at the Tuesday session. This association supervises the Sunday school work in 124 countries with a total enrollment of 36,500,000 members.

The Rev. Albert Edward Day, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Baltimore, will speak on "The Sunday School—a School of Religion" at the Monday evening session.

The program, which is open to the public, has been arranged by a committee of which W. W. Millan, president of the association, is chairman and the following members: E. H. DeGroot, jr., Mrs. O. R. Balderson, Page McK. Etchison, John A. Patterson, jr., and John L. Bateman.

Baptist Church 'Rallies' To Wipe Out Its Debt

Denominating its effort as an "old-time" rally, the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, on whose rolls are the names of 6,000 members, approximately half of the colored church membership here, has set out to clear up indebtedness incurred by purchase of property adjoining the church, taken over to prevent its occupation by an objectionable tenant.

The church, organized in 1866, has still among its membership two of its founders, Mrs. Maria Florida and Mrs. Anna Chase, both over 90. It will celebrate the fifth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. C. T. Murray November 11 to 19.

Playroom Possibilities Emphasized by Display

Playrooms can be made out of any so-called waste space in a house, such as basement or attic corners, the Washington Better Housing Campaign committee argued yesterday, opening a window display at its Shoreham Building headquarters.

All it takes, according to a layout designed by Mrs. Nancy James Elmore, is some suitable curtains and drapes, a marionette theater, Siamese fighting fish, flowers or similar objects.

Sermon Picked By Dr. Perkins

"What Are You For?" Is Topic Selected by Universalist Church Pastor.

"What Are You For?" is the sermon theme chosen by the Rev. Dr. Frederic W. Perkins for the 11 a. m. service tomorrow at the Universalist National Memorial Church. Dr. Perkins leaves for Boston tomorrow evening, where he will represent the National Church in a conference with the general convention trustees at their board meeting there next week.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet for luncheon at noon Tuesday in Perkins Hall. Mrs. C. M. Beaty is chairman of the committee on arrangements and has planned a card party under the supervision of the Mrs. J. William Lee Circle.

The Sunday evening group will meet for supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman E. Hicks tomorrow. The church school will assemble at 10:15 a. m. while the adult Bible class will meet with Dr. Perkins following the church service.
